INTRODUCTION

Early History of Paine Family.

The surmane of Paine, however spelled, indicates a Norman origin. Rollo or Rolf, Duke of Normandy, in the Ninth Century became a convert to Christianity. The people of his Dukedom, however, outside of the larger places, resisted the new religion, as is usually the case in all innovations, which first find favor in the cities, expanding gradually throughout the country. Now the word "paganus" meant originally and solely, a dweller in the country as distinguished from one who dwells in the city." So general was the refusal at first of the inhabitants of the country to accept the Christian religion, that to be a "countryman," came to mean an "unbeliever," and the word "paganus" to express a double meaning. The name coming to be thus generally adopted, applied to all who refused the Christian baptism.

When William the Conquerer went from Normandy to England he was accompanied by many of this class of people: and so the term became incorporated into the English language with its new meaning. About this time the habit of using surnames became prevalent, and as people usually chose something with which they had previous connection, so the name of "Paganus" came into common use as a family designation. It gradually changed its form however to Pagan, Pagen, Payen, Payne, Payn and Paine.

The name is found wherever the Norman exodus pervaded. In Italy it assumed the form of Paganini or Pagani.

In connection with this name, Bardsley says: "At the close of the Norman dynasty it had threatened to become one of the most familiar appellations in England and thus while in our dictionaries, 'Pagan' still represents a state of heathenism, in our directories it has long been converted to the purpose of Christianity."

No history of the Paine family would be complete without a reference to two men, who made the name a famous one in the early history of England.

The first of these is "Pagen of Domesday" 1041-1086, and the second is Hugh de Payen, a crusader and founder of the Order of Knights Templar. For the following extract we are indebted to the "Paine Genealogy" by Mr. Albert W. Paine, of Bangor, Maine.

"When William the Conqueror became firmly established upon the English throne, he caused an inventory and appraisal of his Kingdom to be made, which included the names of all the land owners. Prominent among these was "Pagen", who is reported as holder of lands either "of the King or others," in at least sixteen different counties, and to the number of thirty-eight or more holdings in all; and the significant remark is added by the commissioner of returns, that "he could go whither so ever he would".

These holdings were so located in different counties, that, leaving Hants or Hampshire by the Isle of Wight where the New Forest was located, he could travel north to "the wash", on the North Sea; thence west across the island to the Irish Sea; thence south to the British Channel; thence east to the place of starting, and at every step be in country where he owned land and consequently had right of protection.

This was his peculiar baronial privilege, arising from his rank and probable connection with the king.

He had settled in England from Normandy before the conquest, as is plainly evidenced by the records, and was consequently there to share with the "Conqueror" the brunt of battle and the crown of success.

He died about the same time that the Domesday book was compiled in 1086, leaving Edmund, his eldest son and heir, to inherit his immense estate and dignities, as well as his favor with the king.

THE CRUSADES AND HUGH DE PAYEN

Following close upon the Norman conquest of England come the Crusades, the first of which has a particular importance to the Paine race.

At its termination, the celebrated Hugh de Payen remained behind for the purpose of more surely securing its grand results. For long months he acted the part of guide, with others, for all such pilgrims as might need aid and conduct to their journey's end, and more particularly from the crossing of Jordan to the City of Jerusalem.

For this purpose he organized a force adapted to the occasion and diligently attended to the work. In company with Godfrey de St. Omer, he instituted an order known as the Templars of the Cross, the sole object of which was to further the great objects of the Crusaders' mission by protecting the Holy Places and rendering safe the journey of all pilgrims to the Holy Shrine.

The original organization embraced only seven others besides themselves. They were both poor, but their undertaking was patronized by the King of Jerusalem, Baldwin II, who not only gave them his countenance, but assigned to them their lodgings in his palace, and made them the recipients of his personal favor and society. Of their poverty they made no secret, but emblazoned it on their seal by adopting as a device "a horse with two riders".

From this small beginning, the order soon began to extend its power until it came to be the most powerful and opulent of all organizations, then probably existing in the world; controlling the fate of nations, and even demanding and receiving from the Pope an acknowledgment of its asserted rights. Its original organization was A. D. 1178, and continued to exist until 1312, nearly two centuries, when after five or six years of violent action, Philip the Fair of France, and Pope Clement V, succeeded in abolishing it, and appropriating its immense possessions to the use of the various sovereigns of the different nations where they were deposited. In Portugal, the order still exists, under the name of "Knights of Christ."

The pledge of every Templar bound him to defend at the peril of his life the mysteries of the Christian faith, to perform military service beyond the seas whenever called upon to do so, and "never to fly before three Infidels even when alone."

During all the ages while the order had life, and ever since, the two original founders have been celebrated for their work as its originators, even after their death, as its peculiar protectors and guardians.

Who Hugh de Payen was, genealogically, or to what line he belonged, of the numerous families now existing is a matter of much interest.

That he was a Norman is very clear, for at that early day the name had not gone beyond the field of its origin, for only a single generation, or two, had then passed since surnames had been first adopted. His name too, indicates that he was the son of a father who bore the same name, and who lived necessarily during the war and reign of the Conqueror. He was too, as a Norman, in the Crusade, one of the soldiers or followers of Robert the Duke.

The suddenness and success with which he entered upon his great work and organized the order and advanced its cause, show most conclusively that he must have had what is often spoken of as a "good start" in life.

A footman's or private's position in an army is ever a place not only of difficulty, but of improbability, from which to arise at once to eminence or favor.

In order to do this, he must have had the prestige of noble birth, or other extra merit, to give him such an impetus as he actually enjoyed.

Thus and thus only, could he have attained so suddenly the high pinnacle of fame and favor to which he arrived. This conclusion is supported by the facts already stated with reference to his favor with Baldwin II, King of Jerusalem, who gave him lodgings in his palace, and the prestige of his high office.

From the reading of Domesday, we have seen that Pagen or Payen, was one of William the Conqueror's chief barons, on whom he especially bestowed his favors; and Robert, the Duke, under whom Hugh went to the Crusades, was the son of the Conqueror, thus placing the two sons (if sons they were) in direct communication with each other. The conclusion is certainly very natural and probable, that Hugh de Payen, (the son of Payen) was really the son of him of Domesday, Edmund being his oldest son and heir. That he was poor, though thus the son of a rich father, is readily explainable by the fact of the then prevailing law of primogeniture which gave the whole inheritance to the oldest son, and left the younger poor, a fact of so much importance that it led in the days of heraldry to the adoption of a particular feature on the coat of arms to express it. This feature was the placing on the shield a Martlet, a foot-less bird, to indicate that the party had no land to stand on, and hence no use for feet.

One of the extracts from Domesday is the following: "Edmund the son of Pagen, holds of the King, and Hugh holds of him."

That this Hugh thus spoken of was Hugh de Payen, cannot certainly be determined, but the fact that his surname is not given, but simply his Christian name, rather implies that his surname was the same with his under whom he held, and who is related as being "the son of Pagen."

This conclusion can hardly be resisted, that the great Crusader was the son of him on whom King William so abundantly showered his favors, and that it was this favor with King William which opened the palace doors of King Baldwin at Jerusalem, and gave to the poor son a home and the prestige of his influence and his power as before related.

Coat-of-arms; "In the compilation of all of the known crests of Great Britain and Ireland, by Fairbairns, twenty-six different ones are given to the name of Payne."

CHAPTER I.

Six Generations of the Paine Family of Frittenden and Tenterden, England; and Generations I and II of the Paine Family of Braintree, Massachusetts.

Many surmises have been made as to the English ancestry of Moses Paine of Braintree, Massachusetts, but it was not until 1912 that the discovery of his ancestry and place of emigration was found by Miss Elizabeth French, a genealogist connected with the New England Genealogical and Historical Society. Thanks to her efforts, we have the line established back to "John Payn of Frythenden," whose will is dated April 12, 1463.

By means of their wills the line is traced through six generations as follows:

John Payn of Frittenden, Eng. (Gen. I, No. I), whose will is dated April 1463, m. Joane ———.

GENERATION II

Children of John and Joane Payn.

THE WILL OF JOHN PAYN OF FFRYTHENDEN DATED 12
APRIL 1463

After my death my feofees shall grant to Joane my wife and her heirs eight pieces of land and meadow called Cehetefeld Tweymedys, Johanmeds, le

Broke, Gretebrodefeld, Lytylbrodefeld and Stonefeld, containing thirty acres of land in Ffrythenden upon the dens of Bubherst and Bokherst, during the life of Agnes my mother, to provide the said Agnes with sufficient meat and drink, clothing, shoes and all other necessities, if the said Agnes be willing to dwell with Joane, but if not then my feofees shall deliver those eight pieces of land to Agnes my mother during her life to provide those things as she pleases. At the death of Agnes my mother, Joane my wife and Edmund my son shall each of them have half of the said lands and at the death of Joane my wife, my son Edmund shall have them all. At the Feast of St. Michael next after my death my feofees shall enfeoff my son Edmund in my messuage at Bokherst and in all my other lands meadows and gardens upon the den of Bokherst, to him his heirs and assigns forever. Except one piece of land situated upon the den of Bokherst called le Fyveacrys, the profits of which land and five pieces of land situated in Ulcombe upon the den of Boycote, shall go to my wife Joane until my daughter Elizabeth shall be married and then my feofees shall sell the said land and of the money pay £10 and the residue to my wife Joane. My wife Joane to receive the profits of all my lands upon the den of Peseregge until Stephen my son comes to the age of twenty years and then my feofees to deliver to him and his heirs forever four pieces of land containing ten acres upon the den of Peseregge, viz. to the highway to the south. All my other lands upon the said den of Peseregge to my wife for life and after her death to go to my son Stephen and his heirs forever. And if he die within the age of twenty years then my wife Joane to have the four pieces containing ten acres, situated south to the highway and all other lands upon the den of Peseregge. If both my sons die without lawful issue, then after the death of my wife all my lands to be sold and the money to be used for a priest to sing in the church of Ffrethyden for three years 20£, praying for my soul and my parents' souls, five marks to the repair of the bad roads between Haddyscrosse and Stapylderst and five marks to the marriage of poor maids of the parish of Ffrethynden.

THE FOUNDERS OF THE PAINE FAMILY IN NEW ENGLAND.

(From Paine Family Records. H. D. Paine).

Tradition had assigned to Thomas Paine, whose name appears as Deputy from Yarmouth (Cape Cod) to the first General Court of the Colony of Plymouth, in 1639, the distinction of having been the earliest known voyager of our name to the New England shores. His son, Thomas, removed to Eastham and became the progenitor of one of the most extensive divisions of the American race of this name, one of his descendants being Robert Treat Paine, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Next in order to Thomas, founder of the Eastham branch of the Paine family, was William Paine, who, with his wife Ann, and five children embarked on the "Increase" at London, in 1635.

He settled on his arrival at Watertown, Mass., but afterward removed to Ipswich, where he attained to large influence in affairs of the town and commonwealth, and became the founder of the "Ipswich" branch of the New England Paines.

Robert Paine, a brother of the last named, came to New England not long after, and became also an inhabitant of Ipswich, Mass.

Both these brothers were men of enterprise and liberality, and contributed by their wealth and example to the prosperity and credit of the town and colony.

In 1635, there also came as passengers in the "Abigail" from London, William Paine aged 15, and John Paine aged 14, but of their subsequent history nothing definite has come to light.

Stephen Paine, with his wife Rose, and three children, took passage in the "Diligence" in 1638, and came to Hingham, Plymouth Colony.

In a few years he became one of the first proprietors and inhabitants of Rehoboth, on the borders of Rhode Island; and was an active and leading man in the town and colony until his death and was ancestor of the Rehoboth branch of the Paine family.

Feb. 6 of the same year, Anthony Paine was "received to be an inhabitant" at Portsmouth, R. I., but further particulars are wanting.

In 1641, Moses Paine was "admitted freeman" at Braintree Mass., but the date of his arrival has not been determined.

By his will two years later, 1643, his property, which was considerable, and included estates at Concord and Piscataqua, was divided between two sons and a daughter.

A partial record of his descendants is found in "Thayers Family Memorial;" Hingham, 1836.

William Paine, in New Haven, was made "Freeman" and had lands laid out to him in 1647. In 1649, he was released from bringing his arms to church on the Lord's day, and lecture days, and his fine for non-attendance on public worship was partly remitted, on account of his living afar off, having a lame wife, and three young children.

There was another Thomas Paine, at Dover, in 1659. He was constable in 1687. His will, dated 1694, was proved in 1700, by which it appears that his wife's name was Elizabeth, and that his only son Thomas and three daughters, were all minors at his death.

In the records of the Society of Friends, in Newport, R. I., mention is made of the birth in 1660 of Amy, daughter of James and Amy Paine.

Tobias Payne, from Jamaica, married in 1665 at Boston, Sarah Winslow Standish, the widow of Miles Standish, Jr.

BRAINTREE AND QUINCY.

(From "Where American Independence Began," by Daniel Munro Wilson).

"In no other community in the colony of Massachusetts was the love of independence more central than in the North Precinct of the old town of Braintree, later set off and named Quincy. Nowhere else was the right of self-government more tenaciously held, and no other spot is more sacredly devoted to freedom by the sacrifices and cherished visions of its inhabitants. So typical in its development that C. F. Adams, the younger, illustrates by it the unfolding thought and institutions of Massachusetts; it is also renowned for anticipating beyond other towns the manifest destiny of the colonies. There the word Independence had its earliest historical utterance, and there some of its most illustrious champions had their origin.

John Adams, the great advocate of Independence, and Samuel Adams, the "Father of the American Revolution," had in Henry Adams of Braintree the same progenitor. They were cousins in the fourth generation from that "first emigrant," Henry. Though Samuel was born in Boston, September 16, 1722, he was so closely associated with the Braintree cousins and so allied to them in the essential qualities of character that it is not going too far afield to include him within that group of famous persons who made the annals of this ancient town on the South of Boston so memorable with their high aspirations and devoted patriotism. These two are commanding figures, but other men, sons of old Braintree and Quincy, men whose names will never be obliterated from the splendid page which tells the story of the Revolution, stood with them, shoulder to shoulder in the hour of conflict. We have but to name the Quincys and John Hancock, to indicate their high character and achievements. Add to these Abigail Adams and the "Dorothy Q." who married Hancock, and there is presented a group of distinguished patriots hardly excelled by that which made famous the far larger town of Boston.

In the aspirations and heroisms of that little community of Braintree, now Quincy, was surprisingly manifested the genius of the American people. There, if it may be said of any one place, Independence began. Its history is on a small scale the record of the development of the ideals of the Republic; its great citizens in every critical period devoted themselves with entire unselfishness and telling powers to the service of the nation. Few towns can boast of Annals more brightly colored, not only with the deeds of patriots, but with the surprises of romance; not only with the sturdy enterprises of plain liberty-loving farmers, but with the debonair discourse and activities of the colonial gentility."

The writer had the pleasure of spending several days in the old towns of Braintree and Quincy and of visiting the places of historic interest, which make them a place of pilgrimage for all who are interested in the early history of our country.

"Probably the first place visited by all tourists is a triangle shaped area where stand the Adams houses, or the birth-places of the first and sixth presidents of the United States. In the apex of the triangle is the John Quincy Adams birthplace, and beyond it and separated from it by only a narrow strip of lawn, is the older house in which his father, John Adams was born. The older house was built in 1681, and John Adams was born in it in 1735. In 1764 he married Abigail Smith of Weymouth and brought his bride to the newer house which was built in 1716 and in which John Quincy Adams was born in 1767.

The older house is cared for and kept open to the public by the Daughters of the American Revolution: It is a "plain square honest block of a house, widened by a lean-to, of the type commonly built by the farmers of that period." The old Plymough highway ran in front of it, and around it was the land comprising the original farm. The entrance to it is through a turnstile, and the interior of the house has been restored as nearly as possible to its original appearance two hundred years ago.

The kitchen is the most interesting of all the rooms, and contains one of the largest fireplaces in New England, fully eight feet wide.

One of the articles shown is the old cheese strainer which belonged to Abigail Adams.

Above the mantel is an old musket, and the walls are covered with fac-similes of historical documents such as the "Declaration of Independence" which the boy who was born upstairs helped to make.

Over the kitchen is the room in which John Adams was born.

This is a most interesting room, and contains a four poster bed, a hair trunk, and a chair which belonged to John Adams.

There is also a case containing a portion of the riding cloak which John Adams wore, and a slipper worn by Abigail at the court of France. The entire house is furnished plainly as it must have been originally, but with most interesting relics of "ye olden time."

The house adjoining, which was occupied by John and Abigail Adams after their marriage, is now in possession of the Quincy Historical Society. It is similar in appearance, and the best features of both houses are the doorways which are really handsome examples of architecture. This home like the other, is plainly but substantially furnished, and upon the walls are found extracts from letters written by Abigail Adams to her husband, many of them during the Revolution, which show her to have been a woman of most sterling qualities, as well as of great personal charm."

Quite near the Adams houses, which are close to the dividing line between Braintree and Quincy, was originally a lane leading to the estate owned by Moses Paine and his descendants.

A mile distant is the "square," where "town meetings" were held in ancient times when the town was governed in this manner.

"In the old New England town meeting man is conscious of his own sovereignty, and counts for all he is worth, and all business and elections are done above-board and by unquestioned majorities. Simple, direct, and democratic, this form of government is the ideal of free institutions, and nothing as good can be devised to take its place."

It was composed partly of "freemen" who had been duly elected to citizenship, and had taken the freeman's oath, and so were entitled to all freedom in the matter of speech or vote.

Adjacent to the town hall is the ancient cemetery which belongs to the "First Church". The names which have made famous the old towns of Braintree and Quincy are found chiseled upon the tombstones of this old burying ground, which is of particular interest to those members of the Paine family included in this book, for here lie the ancestral families of Paine, Bass, Adams, and Baxter.

One tombstone is of special interest to all who visit this cemetery.

It was erected by President John Adams and upon the great flat slab covering the tomb is the following inscription.

"In memory of Henry Adams who took his flight from the Dragon Persecution in England, and alighted with eight sons near Wallaston. This stone and several others have been placed in this yard by a great-great-grandson from a veneration of the piety, humility, simplicity, prudence, patience, temperance, frugality, industry and perseverance of his ancestors, in hope of recommending an imitation of their virtues to posterity."

Beside this tomb is another, where lies "Joseph Adams, one of the original proprietors of Braintree."

Both the presidents, John Adams, and John Quincy Adams, with their wives, are buried beneath the old church across the street, then known as the "First Church" (Congregational), now known as "First Congregational Society, Quincy, Unitarian."

The present stone church replaced the old wooden structure in which the ancestors of the presidents had worshiped.

"The new building was made possible by a gift from the elder John Adams. His death occurred on Independence Day, 1836, and his body was placed in a crypt beneath the church portico soon after the dedication of the edifice. The church is a severely plain rectangle of granite blocks, with an Ionic porch upon the front, and a pediment after the manner of the old Greek temples.

A little farther out is the Adams mansion where John and Abigail Adams lived in later life, after their residence abroad and in the "White House."

In this home were celebrated the golden weddings of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Charles Francis Adams.

"Almost opposite the Adams mansion is the famous old house which bears the name of "Dorothy Q." Edmund Quincy arrived in Boston in 1633 with his wife Judith and two children. In 1635, there was granted to him and William Coddington a large stretch of land, on which Coddington at once built a farm house.

Judith Quincy was widowed and married to Moses Paine, 1st. (See Paine Family) and entered upon the full occupancy of this house.

Her son Edmund Quincy, the second, married Joanna Hoar. When her grandson, Edmund Quincy, the third, built a new house in 1705, he incorporated with it the Coddington farm-house.

It is a very interesting house, because of its historic associations, and because the Coddington portion has been called the "most ancient structure in New England."

The kitchen is an immense room, with a large fireplace and settle beside it. The room has been restored to its original color, and it required the labors of ten men for three weeks to scrape off the layers of paint which had accumulated during nearly three centuries. While only a small part of the furniture is original, it is all colonial, and much of it historical. The most interesting thing about this old room, is the tradition that "it was here that the scheme of American Independence was first planned by John Adams, Samuel Adams, John Hancock, and other patriots."

The dining room is very handsome, with white wood-work, a buffet filled with rare old china, an urn of satinwood for silver, and a fine mahogany table.

The drawing-room is both beautiful and interesting; The paper upon the walls is covered with Venuses and Cupids, and was purchased for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy and John Hancock.

This room is also fitted with fine old Colonial furniture, and in the smaller drawing-room beyond is a fine spinet.

Upstairs are beautiful bedrooms, in one of which, Lafayette is said to have slept and upon the window of another are the initials J. H. which John Hancock scratched there so many years ago.

This fine old mansion, which stands in the midst of beautiful grounds, is now the property of the "Colonial Dames" of Massachusetts, and is cared for and kept open to the public by that society.

It is a matter of gratification that our family tree should have taken root in such an historical and interesting spot as old Braintree, and Quincy, and that our ancestors played a prominent part in the town which has gone down into history as the place "Where American Independence Began."

THE PAINE FAMILY OF BRAINTREE, MASSACHUSETTS.

Moses Paine and Peter Brackett bought of the Indians in 1642 a tract of land eight miles square, at what is now called Mendon.

"Moses Paine and Peter Brackett were grantees of the Township of Mendon. (N. E. H. and G. Register, Vol. 22, p. 43)."

"Moses Paine was proprietor of Cambridge before 1638. Freeman, June 2, 1641." (Pope's Pioneers of Massachusetts.) Admission to freemanship in 1641, was dependent (1) upon age (21 years). (2) church membership. (3) formal proposition to the general court. (4) acceptance by that body or some delegated authority. (5) the taking of a freeman's oath.

The following extract is made from the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Vol. 65, pages 290-291.

PAINÉ

Among the emigrants from Kent County, England, who came to New England with the company in "The Castle" in 1638, was Moses Paine (with his children Elizabeth, Moses and Stephen), whose forebears had long resided in Frittenden and vicinity, among them Stephen Payne of Frittenden, supervisor of the will of Thomas Igylden in 1497.

The emigrant's first marriage appears in the Marriage Licenses of Canterbury: Moses Paine of Frittenden and Mar. Benison of Tenterden, virgin."

A few years after his marriage Moses Paine appears in Tenterden, where the registers give the records of his children and his second wife.

From the will of his father, Nicholas Paine, it will be seen that, with the exception of some legacies to his wife, daughters, and grandchildren, he left all of his property to Moses, who was probably at that time his only living son.

Moses Paine was married ab. 1642 at Braintree, Massachusetts, to Judith, widow of Edmund Quincy.

He had estates at Concord, Cambridge, Piscataqua and other places, and was evidently a man of wealth and position.

A year later he died, leaving half of his estate to his son Moses; a quarter to his daughter Elizabeth; a quarter to his son Stephen; while his wife was cut off with twenty shillings.

No reason is given for this marked discrimination against his wife, and we can but hope that he provided for her during his life.

Her maiden name was Pares, and she came to this country as the wife of Edmund Quincy, in 1633; two years after which her first husband died, leaving two children, both born in England. After the death of her second husband, Moses Paine, she married a third time, and became the wife of Robert Hull, whose son John had already married her daughter, Judith Quincy.

The inventory of the estate of Moses Paine was executed on the 30th of the 8th mo, 1643. The value as there estimated, amounted to £671.0.3; the debts to be paid out £73.5.6. The full text of the will is as follows:

It is dated on the 17th. of ye 4th. mo., commonly called June, (according to the old reckoning which fixed the beginning of the year in March.)

"I, Moses Paine, of Braintree, in New England, Gentleman: Appoints eldest son, Moses, executor, Bequeaths to Steven, my second son, one quarter of my goodes and lands in Braintree, Cambridge, Concord, and Piscataqua, in New England; a quarter of my goods or debts in Ould England if they may be recovered. To Elizabeth Paine, my daughter, one quarter of my goods in the forenamed places and in Ould England if they may be recovered. Out of the former household stuffe, that one chest of fine linen to be given to her; excepting two pairs of fine and strong sheets to be given to son Moses, and two pairs to son Stephen, strong and good. Sonne Stephen to be under sonne Moses tuition till at the age of 20 and 3 years." To sonne Stephen, twenty pounds sterling and to be brought up at schools for three months and six months, for the betterment of his reading and writing; to be paid for by sonne Moses.

Lastly, the moiety and one-half of my estate, goods, house and lands, cattle, debts; moveables and chattels, to be given to my oldest sonne, Moses Paine. Daughter Elizabeth to be paid her portion within three months after my decease. As an addition to this Last Will, I, Moses Paine, bequeath to my wife, Judith Paine, twenty shillings, to be paid her within the space of ten years after my decease.

Residence: Braintree and Medfield, Massachusetts.

"The marriage of Henry Adams and Elizabeth Paine was the first recorded on Braintree Records. (page 629).

Both Adams and his wife Elizabeth Paine met with tragical deaths. In the second year of King Phillip's war, as is narrated at length in several histories of that eventful period, Adams himself, who was lieutenant of the town, was killed at his own door by a shot from the hostile Indians, Feb. 21, 1676.

The following account of the fatal casualty that befell his wife, is taken from Gookin's Praying Indians. 'The same night, the lieutenant's widow, being at Mr. Wilson's, the minister's house, being upon a bed in the chamber, divers soldiers and commanders being in the room underneath, Captain Jacob having a gun in his hand, half bent, with the muzzle upwards, be being taking his leave to go to his quarters, by some accident the gun fired and shot through floor, mat, and through the bed of the lieutenant's widow and slew her also." Though mortally wounded, she survived a week after the injury.'” (Paine Family Records, (H. D. Paine) p.165).

(2). Will of MOSES PAINE, (Gen. III, No. 28), Suffolk Probate Records, Vol. 39, p. 113.

This will was probated July 15, 1746, and contains provision for his children as follows:

To Moses Paine, his son, "The homestead, two acres of salt meadow, household movables, etc," and Mr. John Flavels works, in two volumes."

To his son-in-law, Samuel Hayward, "ten shillings in money, old tenor, and no more, because of his being so often out of order, and discomposed in his mind."

To his daughter, Mary Hayward, "one acre of salt meadow, thirty pounds in money, old tenor, besides seventy pounds already received."

To the children of Hannah Nightingale, deceased, "forty pounds in money, besides sixty-five pounds already received."

To his daughter, Sarah Adams, "besides ninety pounds already received, he bequeaths one third of the money now is the hands of Mrs. Hannah Fairweather."

In conclusion, he says: "All my right in Father Pierce's outlands in Dorchester, or elsewhere, shall be equally divided between Moses Paine, Mary Hayward, and Hannah Nightingale's children, viz: Samuel and Joseph Nightingale. Moses Paine was made the sole executor, and the will was signed in the presence of Samuel Savell, Samuel Savell Jr., and Joseph Marsh.

Moses Paine was a Deacon of the First Congregational Church of Braintree.

"Moses Paine was chosen town treasurer of Braintree, 1718-19-21, at forty shillings a year for services." (Braintree Records),

Inscriptions on tombstones, Hancock Cemetery, Braintree, Mass.: "Here lyes the body of Deacon Moses Paine, who died June 22, 1746, aged 87 years."

"Here lyes the body of Mary, wife of Deacon Moses Paine, aged 78, who died July 4, 1743."

(History of Old Braintree and Quincy (Patee) p.123).

89 Lydia, b. Jan. 29, 1726.

Descendants of:

Deacon Moses, (Gen. III, No. 28), and Mary (Pierce) Paine.

Moses Paine, (Gen. IV. No. 56), b. June 16, 1700, at Braintree, Mass., d. 1760, at Braintree, Mass.; m. Oct. 31, 1723, at Braintree, Mass., to Abigail Adams, (see No. 24, Adams Family), b. Aug. 13, 1698, at Braintree, Mass.; d. prob. at Braintree, Mass.

Residence: Braintree, Mass.

Authority: "Paine Family Records," (H. D. Paine) p. 191; "Braintree Records," p. 746.

GENERATION V.

Children of Moses and Abigail (Adams) Paine.

90 Abigail, b. Dec. 11, 1728.

91 Mary, b. Jan. 30, 1730.

92 Moses, b. March 30, 1732.

93 Hannah, b. Oct. 17, 1734.

94 David, baptized March 15, 1737-8.

95 Bethiah, baptized Feb. 4, 1741-2.

"The last two children are not mentioned in any of the Paine or Adams genealogies, but they appear as children of Moses Paine in the records of the First Church of Braintree, page 89," as follows: "David, baptized March 15, 1737-8" and "Bethiah, baptized Feb. 4, 1741-2." The fact that the records of the First Church at this time were unindexed probably accounts for the omission of the names of David and Bethiah Paine from the genealogies.

In the settlement of the estate of Moses Paine, (Gen. IV. No. 56), we find that, "on December 16, 1763, the property was divided between Moses Paine, the eldest son, Hannah Wadsworth, Bethiah Hunt, and David Paine, who acted as administrator. The real estate, not admitting of a division, was settled upon David, he to pay the other heirs their shares." (See Suffolk Probate, Vol. 62, p. 638).

The first account of David Paine as administrator of his father's estate was given July 2, 1762. (See Suffolk Probate, Vol. 60, p. 421).

The final account was filed Sept. 5, 1762. (see Suffolk Probate, Vol. 62, p. 634.)

An inventory of the estate signed by John Adams, Johnathan Webb, and Peter Adams is found in Suffolk Probate, Vol. 60, p. 420.

An appraisal of the estate signed by Samuel Bass, Johnathan Webb, and Peter Adams is found in Suffolk Probate, Vol. 62, p. 638.

Mr. George Graves, a resident of La Moille, Ill., and a descendant of David Paine, (Gen. V. No. 94), remembered seeing in his youth a piece of silk taken from a gown worn by Abigail (Adams) Paine, which, family tradition said, "was heavy enough to stand alone."

Lemuel Shepherd Paine, (Gen. VII, No. 123), referred to a relationship existing between his family and that of the Adams family of Braintree, Mass.

Descendants of:

John, (Gen. III, No. 29), and Deborah (Neale) Paine.

Authority: Paine Family Records (H. D. Paine), p. 191.

Stephen Paine, (Gen. IV, No. 60), b. Jan. 19, 1694, at Braintree, Mass.; m. Nov. 23, 1738, at Braintree, Mass., to Mary Littlefield, of Braintree, Mass.

Residence: Braintree, Mass.

GENERATION V.

Children of Stephen and Mary (Littlefield) Paine.

96 Stephen, b. Sept. 6, 1739.

Joseph Paine, (Gen. IV, No. 61), b. Oct. 26, 1695, at Braintree, Mass., m. Jan. 27, 1732, probably at Milton, Mass., to Mary Babcock, of Milton.

Residence: Milton and Boston, Mass.

GENERATION V.

Children of Joseph and Mary (Babcock) Paine.

97 Joseph, b. Feb. 4, 1733.

98 John, b. Oct. 14, 1734.

99 Anna, b. March, 6, 1737.

100 Mary, b. Jan. 7, 1739.

Benjamin Paine, (Gen. IV, No. 63), b. March 6, 1700, at Braintree, Mass., m. 1725, to Elizabeth Copeland (daughter of Thomas Copeland).

GENERATION V.

Children of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Copeland) Paine.

101 Nathaniel, b. April 30, 1726 or 7.

102 Mary, b. May 8, 1730.

103 Phebe, b. July 26, 1737.

104 Phineas, b. Aug. 6, 1742.

CHAPTER V.

Generations V and VI.

Descendants of:

Moses, (Gen. IV, No. 56), and Abigail (Adams) Paine.

Moses Paine, (Gen. V, No. 92), b. March 30, 1732, at Braintree, Mass. (living in 1762, at Braintree, Mass).

Hannah Paine, (Gen. V, No. 93), b. Oct. 17, 1734, at Braintree, Mass., m. at Braintree, Mass., to——— Wadsworth. "Hannah Wadsworth," is mentioned in settlement of estate of Moses Paine, (Gen. IV, No. 56).

David Paine, (Gen. V, No. 94), baptized March 15, 1737-8, at Braintree, Mass., d. July 2, 1807, at Ludlow, Hampden Co., Mass.; m. Sept. 24, 1764, at Douglass, Mass., to Abigail Shepard (see No. 32, Shepard Family), b. May 23, 1746, at Douglass, Mass.; d. July 20, 1834, at Ludlow, Mass.

Residence: Braintree and Ludlow, Mass.

Authority for marriage record: Vital Records of Douglass, Mass., p. 141.

The birth-place of David Paine is given in records of the Revolutionary war, obtained from the office of the Secretary, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, as follows:

"David Paine, birth-place, Braintree, Mass.: residence, Ludlow. Engaged for Ludlow:" (Vol. 74. p. 151).

Record of his death is found in a History of Ludlow (Noon) p. 180.

The birth and marriage records of Abigail Shepard are found in the "Vital Records of Douglass," Mass. Record of her death is found in History of Ludlow, (Noon) p. 180.

The first years after their marriage were spent in Douglass, Mass., after which they removed to Ludlow, Mass.

SERVICES OF DAVID PAINE

In the campaign of 1757, Captain Peter Thayer's company marched in August at the alarm for the relief of Fort William Henry. In the list of privates is the name of David Paine. (Hist. of Old Braintree and Quincy, (Pattee, 1878) p. 125).

Twenty-fourth on the alphabetical list of the twenty-nine soldiers first raised in Ludlow, 1775, to assist in the Revolution, is the name of David Paine. (History of Ludlow) (Noon).

"David Paine" appears signed to a receipt for bounty dated Ludlow, July 1, 1781, received by said Paine for engaging himself to serve in the continental army for the term of three years to the credit of the town of Ludlow. (Vol. 34, 84 Record Index to the Military archives).

"David Paine" appears in a descriptive list of men raised in Hampshire Co. to serve in the Continental Army returned by Noah Goodman, Supt. "Age 40 years, stature 5 ft. 7 in., complexion light, hair light, occupation farmer. Engaged June 18, 1781, engaged for town of Ludlow, term 3 years." (Vol. 33, 627).—[age evidently incorrectly stated.]

"David Paine" appears with rank of private on Muster Rolls of Capt. Eliphalet Thorps Co. Lt. Col. John Brooks (7th) regt, for July-Dec. 1781. Term 3 years. Rolls dated at Phillipsburg, Peekskill and York Huts. (Vol. 51, file 11).

"David Paine" appears in a Register of Furloughs

SWORD CARRIED BY DAVID PAINE
IN THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

granted subsequently to Jan. 1, 1781, to the non-commissioned officers and privates in the 7th Mass. Regt. commanded by John Brooks, Lieut. Col. Leave given said Paine by Col. Jackson, March 25, 1783, to go from Windsor to Ludlow for 21 days. Reported "overstayed one day."

David Paine, birthplace, Braintree, Mass.; residence, Ludlow; Engaged for Ludlow: (Vol. 74, p. 151).

Records furnished from Office of Secretary, Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The sword carried by David Paine in the Revolutionary war, is now in the possession of Horace H. Paine of Palmer, Mass.

As early as 1785, "David Daniels, David Paine, and John Scranton are excused from paying church rates; they presenting certificates setting forth their adhesion to the Baptist faith signed by Elder Seth Clark, minister of the Baptist Church at Wilbraham." (History of Ludlow, Mass. (Noon) p. 31).

"Among the casualties of the time was the death of David Paine who was found July 2, 1807, dead at Burying-ground Hill, in sight of his house, having fallen beneath his cart on returning from the mill and perished by the crushing of the wheels." (Ibid p. 58).

"Mr. David Paine
departed this life July 2nd, 1807, by a cart-wheel
running across his breast.
He was a friend of religion and piety."

Near this, is another stone with this inscription:

"Abigail, wife of David Paine, died July 20, 1834, aged 88."

Under "Braintree Marriage Intentions," we find the following: "September 16, 1762, David Paine and Sallie Whitney."

A little farther on we find the following: "April 4, 1767, Sallie Whitney and Micajah Pope of Stoughton were married."

It is impossible at this day to divine why the proposed marriage of David Paine, of which publishment was made, went no farther." However, when Sallie Whitney became the wife of Micajah Pope, he had left Braintree and in the meantime, had married Abigail Shepard at Douglass, Mass.

The following instrument, dated "the seventh day of February in the tenth year of his Majesty's reign, Anno. Dom. 1770," shows that David Paine was called a "resident of Springfield," which at that time was included in Hampshire Co., province of Massachusetts Bay. (This accounts for a statement in later years, by his son, David Paine, that he was born in Hampshire Co., in 1775). It is probable that at that time Ludlow may have been a part of the township of Springfield;—the word "Town" in New England being equivalent to township.

"To All People to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting. Know Ye, That we Henry Chapin, Yeoman, and Seth Chapin, Yeoman, both of Springfield in the County of Hampshire and Province of the Massachusetts Bay for and in consideration of the sum of eight pounds current money of the Province aforesaid, to us in hand paid before the en-sealing thereof by David Paine of Springfield aforesaid, Yeoman, the receipt whereof we do hereby acknowledge and are fully satisfied, contented, and paid, have given, granted, bargained, sold, aliened, released, conveyed and confirmed, and by these presents, do freely, clearly, and absolutely give,

(Contributed by Geo. W. Graves, No. 210.)

In the name of God, Amen:

I, David Paine, of Ludlow, County of Hampshire and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, do make, ordain and declare this instrument subscribed with my name to be my last will and testament.

Done in usual health of body and mind.

Imprimis: All my debts are to be punctually paid, and the legacies hereinafter bequeathed are to be discharged as soon as circumstances will permit, and in the manner directed.

Item: To my dearly beloved wife, Abigail Paine, I give and bequeath one half of my household furniture, the use of one room, and one cow to be kept out of my estate, the keeping of the cow and the use of the room to be only while she is my widow.

Item: To my eldest daughter, Eunice, I give and bequeath One Dollar.

Item: To my son, David, I give and bequeath One Dollar.

Item: To my daughter, Sally Shearer, I give and bequeath the sum of Forty Dollars.

Item: To my sons, Lemuel and Jonathan, I give and bequeath all my estate that shall remain after my debts, the above legacies and my funeral charges are paid, consisting of lands, livestock, buildings, house-hold furniture and whatever is mine.

Lastly: I constitute and appoint my son, Lemuel Paine, executor and administrator of this will and Testament.

In presence of:

ABIGAL PAINE.

Wilbraham, Sept. 17, 1805.

So far, the records of most of the descendants of Moses Paine (Gen. I, No. 1), have been copied from the Paine Family Records, (H. D. Paine), which do not go beyond the sixth generation. By continued effort, and correspondence with other descendants of the present generation, the following lines have been fully established, containing records of nearly all of the descendants of David, (Gen. V, No. 94), youngest son of Moses and Abigail (Adams) Paine.

GENERATION VI.

Children of David and Abigail (Shepard) Paine.

- 105 Eunice, b. at Douglass, Mass., Dec. 6, 1765,
- 106 Jedediah, S., b. at Douglass, Mass., Oct. 26, 1767.
- 107 Levi, b. May 12, 1773, in Ludlow, Mass.
- 108 David, b. Sept. 14, 1775, at Ludlow, Mass.
- 109 Sarah, b. Sept. 22, 1778, in Ludlow, Mass.
- 110 Lemuel, b. 1780, d. young, in Ludlow, Mass.
- 111 Lemuel, b. Sept. 27, 1781, in Ludlow, Mass.
- 112 Jonathan, b. Jan'y 5, 1784, in Ludlow, Mass.

Authority: Will of David Paine, No. 94; (2), Will of Levi Paine No. 107; (3), Letter written Jan. 7, 1856, by H. S. Bundy of Jackson, O., to Lemuel Paine of Belchertown, Mass. (4) Letter of Patrick Shearer, dated "Three Rivers, Mass., July 8, 1839." and included in this book.

Bethiah Paine, (Gen. V, No. 95), baptized Feb. 4, 1741-2, at Braintree, Mass., m. at Braintree, Mass., to Matthew Hunt, of Weymouth. (For records of the descendants of Matthew and Bethiah (Paine) Hunt, see Hunt genealogy).

One genealogist says that "the descendants of Matthew and Bethiah (Paine) Hunt are scattered to the four winds of heaven."

One of them married Benj. C. Sargeant, Mayor of Lowell, Mass.

Another, Charles H. Hunt, was living in Boston in the early 1860's, and was a morocco merchant on Pearl Street.

Descendants of:

Benjamin, (Gen. IV, No. 63), and Elizabeth (Copeland) Paine.

118 Benjamin, b. April 26, 1773.

119 Hannah, b. Dec. 29, 1774.

CHAPTER VI.

Generations VI and VII.

Descendants of:

David, (Gen. V, No. 94), and Abigail (Shepard) Paine.

Eunice Paine, (Gen. VI, No. 105), b. Dec. 6, 1765, at Douglass, Mass., d. after 1829, perhaps in Jackson Co., Ohio.

Jedediah S. Paine, (Gen. VI, No. 106), b. Oct. 26, 1767, at Douglass, Mass.; d. Dec. 25, 1789, at Ludlow, Mass.

Residence: Ludlow, Mass.

Jedediah Paine was a victim of the blue laws of Mass., and the tragic story of his death is told as follows:

"In the last month of 1789, two young men, Jedediah Paine and Solomon Olds, living in the Southeast part of the town, started on Saturday to go to Springfield on business, driving an ox-team. Delayed at town until late, they reached the fording place at Walla Mandups at night. They tarried until morning light and accomplished the rest of their journey. But the Sunday law was technically broken. An eye-witness living near the ford complained of them, carrying the case to the county magistrate, at Northampton. To this place they repaired; judgment was pronounced against them, they to pay a fine and costs. It was Christmas day. While coming through South Hadley, over the fields, they undertook to cross a temporary pond on the new ice, but were so unfortunate as to lose their lives in the attempt. There was great lamentation at Ludlow over this melancholy event, and it was deemed a judgment of God. Great indignation was felt against the informer, who received half the fee."

This took place December 25, 1789. (History of Ludlow (Noon) 1875, pp. 32, 33).

Levi Paine, (Gen. VI, No. 107), b. May 12, 1773, in Ludlow Mass., d. May 12, 1829, at Belchertown, Mass.; m. Lucy Jennings.

Residence: Belchertown, Mass.

The following will, dated April 25, 1829, was recently found among some papers belonging to estate of Lemuel Shepherd Paine of Hamden, Ohio.

WILL OF LEVI PAINE

"In the name of God, Amen: I, Levi Paine, of Belchertown, in the county of Hampshire and commonwealth of Massachusetts, yeoman, considering the uncertainty of this mortal life, and being of sound and perfect mind, and memory, blessed be Almighty for the same:

Do make, ordain, and publish this my last will and testament in manner and form following: that is to say,

First, I give and bequeath unto my beloved wife, Lucy Paine, all my personal property, of whatever name or nature, to her own disposal, and the use and improvement of all my real estate for and during her natural life. After deducting the following bequests and charges namely my just debts and funeral charges, together with the fifteen dollars which I set apart for gravestones to be placed at my grave, I also give and bequeath to Nancy Potter, my adopted child, one hundred dollars to be paid to her when she arrives at twenty-one years of age.

Also I give and bequeath to Daniel R. Potter one hundred dollars, to be paid to him when he shall arrive at twenty-one years of age.

Also I give and bequeath to my beloved mother, Abigail Paine, twenty dollars to be paid six months after my decease, if she survives me. If not, I will and bequeath the same to my beloved wife, Lucy Paine. I further will and bequeath to David Paine, Eunice Paine, Sally Shearer, wife of Patrick Shearer, Lemuel Paine, and Jonathan Paine, my brothers and sister, all of my real estate, at the decease of my beloved wife, to be equally divided between them, and in case of their decease, to be equally divided between their children; and further, the above named Nancy and Daniel R. Potter are to be brought up at the expense of my estate and they are to be subjected to all the legal commands of my wife, Lucy Paine, and she to have the benefit of their services until they arrive at lawful age in order for them to retain the above named legacies, and in case of their decease, or failure on their part in performing their services, these same legacies are not to be paid them, but to revert back to my wife, Lucy Paine. And I do make, ordain, and constitute this to be my last will and testament and do likewise ordain and constitute and appoint my beloved wife, Lucy Paine, and Jonathan Olds the sole executors and administrators of this my last will and testament, utterly disannulling and revoking all former wills by me made.

In witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this twenty-fifth day of April in the year of our Lord 1829.

Signed, sealed, published, and delivered by the above named Levi Paine to be his last will and testament in the presence of us, who, at his request, and in his presence have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses:

Judge David Paine, (Gen. VI, No. 108), b. Sept. 14, 1775, in Ludlow, Mass.; d. Jan. 5, 1856, in Jackson Co., O.; m. March 26, 1801, in Wood Co., W. Va., to Abigail James (see James-Denison Genealogy No. 8); b. March 17, 1777, at Preston, Conn.; d. June 15, 1832, in Jackson Co., O.; (Authority for m. record: Certified copy of marriage record from office of Clerk of Wood Co., W. Va.).

Residence: Hampshire Co., Mass., and Jackson Co., Ohio.

Among the old papers of Hon. H. S. Bundy is a brief biography written by him at the dictation of his father-in-law, Judge David Paine. "Was born in Hampshire County, Mass., on Sept. 14, 1775, emigrated to Connecticut in 1797, resided there for two years and removed from there to Belpre, Ohio, in 1799.

In 1800 removed to Muskingum County; was married to Abigail James on James Island in March, 1801. Removed to Virginia, three miles above Parkersburg, on the Kanawha River, in 1804, thence to Jackson Co. on the farm on which he now resides, in the spring of 1808.

"Joined the M. E. Church, experienced religion in 1809. Brother Cummings, an able and faithful minister of the gospel was then in the wilderness of which subsequently McArthurstown, Jackson, Piketon, Gallia, and their circuits have been formed in part."

There is no date to this fragmentary bit of history, but since the death of Judge Paine occurred in 1856, it must have been written at some time previous to that date.

From the "Story of Methodism in Hamden" the following is taken:

"In the spring of 1808 there came to Jackson County, Ohio, a man who was to have the honor in later years of being a pioneer of Hamden Methodism. He had, a few years before, left his early home in the state of Massachusetts to try his fortune in the new and almost unknown West.

He first stopped at a point in what is now W. Va. and just opposite Blennerhasset Island.

Here he did not tarry long, when, learning of the opportunities in the young state of Ohio, he came to this section and secured land at what is now known as the Bundy Homestead situated just north of Wellston.

This man was David Paine, the grandfather of Mr. B. R. Paine of Hamden. His log cabin was the first dwelling house erected between McArthur and Jackson; and so lonely was the life in the wilds of the forest that he tarried only because he had resolved before locating here, to stay at least one year before leaving. This was the key to his staying longer, for by the time the year had rolled by, he had become somewhat accustomed to the solitude of the frontier, and had decided to remain indefinitely.

His house became the early forerunner of the present M. E. Church. Here the hardy pioneers gathered from miles around to listen to the preaching of the gospel by the early Methodist preachers who allowed no danger to deter them, nor difficulty to hinder, in their God-called mission of love. From this society, there grew the class which had its first organization at Hamden, or Charlestown, as it was then called, about 1838."

From Howe's early history of Ohio we quote the following extract:

"In the early days Jackson County was famous for its salt works and men from the East came frequently with pack horses and carried the salt back with them in sacks."

There being no hotels, the Paine homestead was often a stopping place for these travelers.

One of the granddaughters of Judge Paine lived in his home when a child; and though she did not know him in the days of his activity, but rather in the evening years of his life, has a distinct remembrance of him. Still,

"He was a very religious man, and always with great fervor of his Christian experience. He was scrupulously neat in his personal appearance, was a conversationalist, and was very well educated for those days when books were a luxury."

Ministers and other travelers who were frequently entertained in this homestead, delighted to hear the talk of early times when he lived in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

He always kept up an intercourse with his friends in the East. In 1822, though before the day of railroads, he visited his aged mother, Abigail Shepard Paine, in Massachusetts, and spent six years in his home.

In 1843, Judge Paine, accompanied by his son-in-law, H. S. Bundy, paid a visit to his old home in Massachusetts.

David Paine purchased from the government all the lands constituting the Paine farm, afterward owned by his son-in-law, H. S. Bundy. Here he spent a long and useful life; living to see the wilderness develop into a beautiful and thickly settled agricultural country, and the settlements of Jackson and Hamden into flourishing towns with schools and churches.

When Jackson County was formed, David Paine was made one of the associate judges and was always known thereafter as Judge Paine. He was an earnest temperance worker and during his life labored constantly among his fellow pioneers in the cause of total abstinence.

His was a sweet and sympathetic nature and the deeds of kindness shown by him and his family to less fortunate neighbors were many; and, though his life was of necessity a narrow one, compared with the many advantages we possess today, it was, nevertheless, a very useful one.

In the home of his great-granddaughter, there hangs an oil portrait of Judge Paine which shows us a long, slender face, in which we see the earnestness and force of character always attributed to him by those who knew him well.

The following letter, written by Hon. H. S. Bundy, of Wellston, Ohio, relating to the death of his father-in-law, Judge Paine, was for fifty years in the possession of Mrs. Louise (Paine) Alden of Springfield, Mass.

SENATE CHAMBER,
COLUMBUS, OHIO, Jan. 7, 1856.

Mr. LEMUEL PAINE,

DEAR UNCLE:

This line will inform you of the death of your esteemed brother, David Paine. He died on the 5th of this month, at my house, at two o'clock p. m.

I left home on Wednesday last (2nd instant,) He was sick when I left, but I hoped he would soon recover.

Well, his work was done, and well done; he was ready to go in every particular and no doubt he is happy with the saints in light. My spirits are much oppressed at the bereavement, but humbly bow to the will of heaven.

H. S. BUNDY.

Among the papers of H. S. Bundy was found the following document, signed by his father-in-law, Judge David Paine, the original being in possession of Mrs. J. B. Foraker.

"Know all men by these presents that I, David Paine, of Clinton township, Jackson Co., state of Ohio; In consideration of three hundred dollars to me paid by Jedediah A. Paine, and David M. Paine of Belchertown, County of Hampshire, and state of Massachusetts, the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge. Have remised, released, and forever quit-claimed, and do for myself,

JUDGE DAVID PAINE

my heirs, by these presents remise, release, and forever quit-claim unto the said Jedediah A. Paine and Daniel M. Paine, their heirs and assigns forever, all the right in and title to Levi Paine, late of Belchertown, deceased in said Belchertown, being my share of said farm willed to me by the last will and testament of the said Levi Paine deceased. To have and to hold the aforementioned premises with all the privilege and appurtenances thereto belonging to the said Jedediah A. Paine, and Daniel M. Paine, their heirs and assigns to them and their use forever in witness whereof, I the said David Paine have hereunto set my hand and seal, this twenty-ninth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight.

The following interesting letter was written by Patrick Shepard Shearer (No. 132), to his father, Patrick Shearer, in 1839, while the former was visiting his relatives in Massachusetts:

BELCHERTOWN, July 6th, 1839.

MY DEAR FATHER:

I take the present opportunity to inform you where I am, and how I am getting along. After leaving Mr. Allen's we went to Meadville, Pa., then to Jamestown, N.Y., passed Angelica, crossed the Genesee river, passed Bath and Crooked lake, Senneca at Jefferson, passed Ithica where there is a canal, railroad, and lake. These lakes are from twenty to forty miles long and have steam boats on them.

I went to Cooperstown on the Susquehanna river, then to Chevvv Valley, where we took the pike, then went to Albany where we crossed the Hudson. Here we saw the cars that run from Albany to Utica. This is the greatest curiosity I ever saw. They had about four hundred passengers, and run at the rate of twenty miles an hour.

From here I went to Stockbridge, Mass., then to Hartford, Conn., where we arrived on the twenty-seventh of June, where I remained until the first of July at Mr. Beaman's. Then I went to Springfield, then to Patsbridge, where I found Uncle King's youngest daughter. I went the next day to the Three Rivers P. O., where I saw Uncle and Aunt King. Aunt's health is very delicate; they live with their two daughters who married Barkers. I went next to Dr. Shearer's, then to Mr. Jenkse's, also to Jedediah and Daniel Paine's. Daniel knew me some distance away. Independence Day now comes in this country on the fourth of July, and we held ours at Thorndyke. They had a band of music and company of young ladies and gentlemen dressed in uniform, and a dinner. Uncle Shaw was there, but I did not see him. I saw cousin Shaw who married Seneth Shaw.

Cousin Shepard Paine has the care of Daniel's part, and he says it is about eleven hundred dollars. Cousin Shepard talked with Uncle Shaw, and told him I was in the place. Uncle Shaw said he thought I could have the money now if I would make a discount. Uncle Joseph's property sold for about one third value. His silver plate and cups sold by the piece for one third of what the silver smith paid second hand. I intended seeing Uncle Shaw before I write, but fearing you would be uneasy I write now. I have been at Uncle Jonathan's and am now at Uncle Lemuel Paine's and expect to go to Uncle Shaw's in a few days.

I stood the journey very well except one bad cold. It was very wet and cold a good part of the way. I rode with my overcoat on from the sixteenth to the twentieth of June and saw flocks of sheep not sheared as late as the twenty-fourth. Crops are very backward in New York, but look better here. Leonard Shearer is in the State's Prison at Boston, but not a criminal. He has charge of the prison and a store in Boston that his brother tends. My relatives appeared to be very glad to see me. Uncle Shaw has some of your part collected now, but I don't know how much. I like this country very well, though not as well as ours. I haven't been homesick yet though I intend to return as soon as I can get my money and not before, if it can be got. A man can travel cheaper in this country than in Ohio, although provisions cost double.

Tell Mr. Jenks his friends are all well in this country. I should like to see you all when time brings it about that we shall meet, but I should like to see Franklin now. I have been through the factories, and saw the machinery and its inmates. The machinery is beyond what I expected. As soon as I see Uncle Shaw and know more about your business, I will write again. Cattle are very high. Cows are worth from forty to eighty dollars per head.

So no more at present.

LEMUEL AND ELIZABETH (MORSE) PAINE

Authority: Family record contributed by H. H. Paine, No. 205.

Mrs. Miriam Barrett Starr, No. 378, a great-great-granddaughter of David Paine, has treasured up a number of anecdotes of the family going back to Revolutionary times. She says, "I well remember my great grandfather, Lemuel Paine, and for eight years I took care of my grandmother Lucy (Paine) Graves. She told me of the hardships which were under-gone by her grandparents David and Abigail (Shepard) Paine, and of the long night of anxiety and tragic death of her grandfather when he was found dead on a hill-side in sight of his house."

After the death of her husband, Abigail (Shepard) Paine made her home with her son Lemuel.

There was a picture in the house of John Quincy Adams, and "my great-grandfather, says Mrs. Barrett, used to look at it and shake his head saying, 'he was my second cousin, and if he was half as contrary a man as he was a boy, I don't see how he ever came to be president.'"

Mrs. Barrett says she can distinctly remember playing with her great-grandfather, and how he used to go walking with her, or sing her to sleep. It was my fourth summer she says, that he went to visit his son Jedediah, at Princeton, Illinios, and was taken ill, and died there.

When two years of age, she removed with her parents to Jackson County, Ohio. She was educated at Muskingum Academy, now Marietta College, at Marietta, Ohio.

This Academy deserves particular attention because of its history—a brief sketch of which appeared recently in connection with Marietta College. From this the following extract is taken: "It is well known throughout the state that Marietta is the oldest town in Ohio and the seat of the first government of the Northwest Territory. It is not so widely known that higher education in that territory began here. The New England people who settled Marietta were strong believers in education. The presence in the town of a high grade Christian College is no accident but the direct outgrowth of the efforts and sacrifices of those pioneers to give their children the best educational advantages. Only two years after the close of the long Indian War which had absorbed resources and energies of the settlers, measures were taken to supplement the common school training with the higher classical learning.

In 1800 the Muskingum Academy was opened in a building just north of the Congregational church. The classics were taught by David Putnam, a grandson of General Israel Putnam and a graduate of Yale, 1793.

His descendants still live in the city and his son was one of the founders of the College. This Academy was maintained for a third of a century under various preceptors.

In 1830 Rev. Luther G. Bingham established the Institute of Education, some of whose departments used for a time the old Muskingum Academy. Two years later this was taken over by a corporation and renamed the "Marietta Collegiate Institute and Western Teachers Seminary". In 1855 the same corporation received a new charter with enlarged powers under the name of "Marietta College."

Residence: Hamden, Vinton County, Ohio.

"Lemuel Shepherd Paine was only six months old when his parents, David and Abigail (James) Paine, removed to Jackson County, Ohio. Shepherd Paine, as he was familiarly known, lived with his parents until he was nineteen years of age, when his father proposed to send him to the Ohio University at Athens, Ohio.

This proposal he met by asking his father to give him the two years remaining of his minority, and allow him to take care of himself. This was conceded, and he thereupon took a lease of his father upon uncleared land, taking the crops for improvements. This he followed until about 1832, when he purchased part of the land upon which he lived until his death.

Soon after his marriage he built the brick house still standing on the hill just west of the town of Hamden, where his children were all born and reared.

Lemuel Shepherd Paine was as truthful and as honest a man as ever lived. He obeyed literally the apostolic injunction "Owe no man anything and provide things honest in the sight of all men."

He possessed a strong intellect, highly endowed by nature, early cultivated by such facilities as were then available. His subsequent reading and mode of thought enriched by experience guided by unusually sound judgment led him into exceptionally few mistakes or blunders in theory or practice. His almost unbroken line of success in business, led him naturally to distrust the judgment of others, hence he supervised all his own affairs; personally adopting his own methods after careful consideration, and which uniformly eventuated in success. In early life he selected farming and stock raising as a business and his fine stock farm of a thousand acres was well known in that section of the state. Adhering constantly and persistently to this one business, never attempting speculations outside, the legitimate and almost certain outcome of which was the acquiring of a large fortune which he left unencumbered at the time of his death." (Obituary of Lemuel Shepherd Paine).

In personal appearance he bore a striking resemblance to his uncle Lemuel Paine. (See photograph).

Elizabeth (Roby) Paine was much revered and beloved by her family and friends: A woman of great dignity, of exalted character, and high purpose, the influence exerted by her must be a lasting one.

Practical, capable, and full of energy and ambition, her household affairs were ably administered, and although at the head of a household which would have taxed the capacity of most women to the utmost, yet she always found time to gratify her literary taste, which was excellent: She was always well read, and well informed concerning the questions of the day. She also possessed great artistic ability, as is shown by the beautiful specimens of embroidery done by her in the earlier years of her life and the fine examples of wood carving and china painting which she took great pleasure in executing during the last ten years of her life, and which are the highly prized possessions of her children.

Elizabeth (Roby) Paine lies beside her husband and two of their children in the cemetery at Hamden, Ohio.

Thomas Denison Paine, (Gen. VII, No. 124), b. Sept. 27, 1810, in Jackson Co., O.; died unmarried. The writer has in her possession an arithmetic in manuscript which was the property of Thomas D. Paine. This ancient and remarkable book calls our attention to the fact that we are only a few years removed from pioneer days in Ohio. It is in two volumes and is made of paper almost as heavy as parchment. This primitive arithmetic is entitled, "The New Federal Calculator or Scholars Assistant, Containing Concise and Admirable Rules for performing the operations of common arithmetic together with numerous examples under each of the rules, varied so as to make them conformable to almost every kind of business. For the use of Schools and Counting Houses, by Thomas F. Sniley, 1830." The second volume relates to compound division, with rules and examples for the same.

This most interesting old book, though yellow from age, is in perfect condition and the ink is as bright as the day it was penned.

It is probable that the original was a printed volume, but that owing to the great difficulty of procuring books at that day in Ohio, Thomas D. Paine had carefully copied it for his own use.

Sarah Paine, (Gen. VII, No. 125), b, May 31, 1813, in Jackson County, Ohio; d. Aug. 2, 1886, in Ross County, Ohio; m. Oct. 11, 1832, in Jackson County, Ohio, to John Nelson Hurst, b. Jan. 6, 1808, at Chillicothe, Ohio; d. Aug. 12, 1889, in Ross County, Ohio.

Residence: Ross County, Ohio.

Authority: Family Records, contributed by Joseph M. Hurst, No. 168.

Sarah (Paine) Hurst was a member of the M. E. Church to which she was a devoted adherent; and was married in the church at Hamden, Ohio, which owed its organization largely to the efforts of her father. Her marriage occurred before the introduction of railways, and the wedding journey from Jackson to Ross County was made on horseback.

That sentiment played a pretty part in those early days, however, is evidenced by the story that as the wedding party crossed the ford at Richmondale, the water was strewn with flowers by friends of the bride. A happy omen, and one that was destined to fulfillment; for the author who visited many times in childhood in the home of "Uncle Nelson" and "Aunt Sally Hurst" remembers it as a most delightful one abounding with comfort and hospitality.

In this home, seven children grew to manhood and womanhood, each imbued with a spirit of reverence for their parents and love for each other, resulting in an atmosphere of harmony that is rarely found. The funeral service of Mrs. Hurst was held in the home where she had lived for fifty-three years. A beautiful tribute was paid to her memory by her nephew, General Samuel Hurst, and a poem read, which was written by her niece, Lou Hurst.

Johnathan D. Paine was a Christian gentleman, whose short life was spent on the old Paine farm, where the city of Wellston is now situated. He was considered a remarkable man on account of his conscientious life, and his integrity. His early death was greatly deplored by his friends and neighbors. (Five years after the death of Douglas Paine, his wife Julia Ann (Hurst) Paine, married Rev. W. W. Cherrington).

Remarks: At the age of fifteen the death of her mother placed Caroline Paine at the head of her father's household, and although so young she manifested great judgment and devotion. She was educated at the "Seminary" in Marietta, Ohio. Throughout her life, Caroline (Paine) Bundy was noted for her "good works". Of a philanthropic nature, she interested herself in caring for the poor of her neighborhood, and her influence for good was felt by all who came in personal contact with her.

Her husband, Hezekiah S. Bundy, was for many years called the "political sage" of southern Ohio; and his services to his state were numerous. In 1848, he was elected to the state legislature and again in 1850. In 1855, he was elected to the state senate. In 1860, was a presidential elector; In 1864, he was elected to congress and again in 1872. He was extensively engaged in the furnace and mineral interests of southern Ohio, and was owner at one time of the Latrobe, Keystone and Eliza furnaces, with vast tracts of coal and ore lands.

In 1872, he was one of the first two lay delegates from Ohio at the Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church that convened at Brooklyn, New York.

Mr. Bundy was again elected to congress in 1893. He was a Republican and one of the founders of the Republican Party. He held advanced views on all public questions; in some instances, years ahead of his party. An advocate of temperance in all things, bringing his personal habits in line with the truths he taught, he was a living example of sobriety. (Obituary of H. S. Bundy).

His personal magnetism was so great that wherever he was known he had a large number of warm personal friends and admirers; and when "Wellston's Grand Old Man", as he was called, passed away, the public schools and business houses were closed upon the day of his funeral service. The funeral oration was delivered by Bishop David H. Moore, a personal friend of Mr. Bundy, and it was found necessary to charter a special train to accommodate the people among whom he had spent a long and useful life, and by whom he was so devoutly loved and honored.

Joseph McKinniss lived in a large brick house just north of Hamden on the McArthur road. The house is still standing and in good state of preservation; and was noted as being the first house in that section, to have hand carving used in the ornamentation of the mantel pieces.

He was the grandson of Charles McKinniss who was born near Bona Bornia, Scotland, in 1722, and was impressed into the British Army in 1744, his regiment being the Grena Grenadiers.

He was in the French and Indian War under Braddock and Washington, and was wounded at Braddock's defeat near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1755.

He was discharged with rank of Captain and received a charter for a tract of land in Nova Scotia from George III, on account of wounds and services rendered.

He was married to Rachel Carr when he was fifty years of age and had the following children:

William, b. 1773.

Robert, b. 1777, d. 1863.

Charles, b. 1780, d. 1857.

Joseph —

George —

Margaret; married John Dick.

John, b. 1788, d. 1864.

James, b. 1794, d. 1858.

Charles died in 1806, and with his wife Rachel was buried in the Butler cemetery, Butler County Pennsylvania. Their son Charles (b. 1780, d. 1857) was the father of Joseph McKinniss, b. June 30, 1801, in Butler County, Pennsylvania. His mother was Martha Craner (b. 1778, d. Aug. 8, 1864), a grand-daughter of Robert Fulton, who was born about 1669 in KilKerry, Ireland, and emigrated to Lancaster, Pennsylvania. She was also a niece of Robert Fulton, Jr., the world renowned civil engineer, who exploited the first steamboat, the first mechanical dredge, the first torpedo, the first successful sub-marine boat, and several other useful inventions. His sister married Charles Craner, and their daughter, Martha, in turn married Charles McKinniss, the Ohio pioneer. With their ten children Craner, Joseph, Clarissa, Nancy, George, Phillip, Charles, Robert, Granville and Rachel, they emigrated to Ohio in 1802. The journey from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to Portsmouth, Ohio, was made in a canoe, fashioned from the trunk of a large pine tree, so commodious it is said, that the family flour barrel was stowed cross-wise in the stern during the trip down the Ohio.

"Mrs. Stephenson was born within what are now the corporate limits of Wellston, Ohio. She died at the residence of her son, Hiram Stephenson. Mrs. Stephenson united with the M. E. Church, and in girlhood and womanhood passed a consistent Christian life.

Pure in thought, chaste in speech, there was in her life a gentility and dignity of character that bespoke a fine quality of mind and heart that was the inheritance of the fine old English family from which she sprung. The passing of Mrs. Stephenson removes one of the few people whose life bound the present to the early history of the country in which she was born, spent a long life and where she died."

Although a very young woman, Mrs. Ralph before her marriage had an extended career in newspaper work in Salt Lake City, Omaha, Chicago, and New York. She was placed at the head of the "Department of Publicity," of the Omaha Exposition.

As a reporter of the Associated Press she received several enviable assignments. She was the only woman correspondent sent by this organization to report the Spanish-American war in Cuba.

Following the Omaha Exposition, Mrs. Ralph received an appointment in 1900, to a position on the United States commission for the Paris Exposition, being the only woman so honored. In Paris she acted as Directress of Publicity so far as the exhibits of the United States were concerned, and did a great deal to bring American goods to the attention of Europeans.

Mrs. Ralph was selected by the Associated Press to attend the marriage of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, and was the only woman admitted to the ceremony in the New Kirk in Amsterdam.

Mrs. Ralph, besides possessing a great talent for organization, and ability as a journalist gives promise of an artistic career.

She is at present studying sculpture in London; she is described as very promising, and her work will be exhibited in the Salon this year. While many honors have come to Mrs. Ralph, she declines to talk of her personal exploits and is very quiet and unassuming, with a charm of personality which is felt by every one who comes in contact with her.

Her husband, Lester Ralph, son of the late Julian Ralph, traveler, war correspondent and author, is one of the foremost illustrators in America. He was an artist in the Turko-Greek war 1897, and in the South African war, 1900.

Robert Mitchell Shearer was a soldier in the Spanish-American war, being Captain of Company A, Second regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Infantry which was mustered out of service at Lexington, Kentucky, October 31, 1898. In August, 1899, he was commissioned by the Secretary of War, Second Lieutenant of Company D, 37th Regiment, United States Volunteer Infantry, then in the Phillipines. Joining his command, he served actively in the field, until by special order he was made Commandant and Captain of the Port of Mauban, Luzon Island; which position he filled until his regiment was ordered to the States for discharge from service. Remaining in Manila at the request of the General commanding, he was appointed Civil Treasurer of the Province of Cavite, and later was transferred to the Treasurership of the Province of Pampanga, in which position he prepared those provinces for taxation and collected the first taxes under American administration. In 1906, he resigned the Treasurership of the Province of Pampanga to accept appointment in the Executive Bureau, Manila, as special agent and representative of the Governor-General, which position he holds at this time, January, 1910.

Earl Shepard Shearer, (Gen. I X, No. 323), b. Dec. 7, 1873, at Wellston Ohio; d. Feb. 20, 1909, at Erlanger, Kentucky.

Earl Shepard Shearer was the first artist ever employed by the old Harper Illustrating Syndicate.

He was one of the founders of the "Sketch Club" of Columbus, Ohio, from which the "Pen and Pencil" club is the direct out-growth.

In 1900, he went to Chicago, Illinois, and opened a studio.

In his short career, Mr. Shearer gained a national reputation as an artist.

He was a member of the Press Club of Chicago; and the resolutions passed by that club at the time of his death, speak most highly of his disposition and ability; and express great sorrow at the loss of one of its most brilliant and honored members.

CHAPTER XII.

OHLER

Jacob Ohler, said by family tradition to have been the ancestor of that branch of the family indicated here, came, according to some of his descendants, from Scotland, and settled at Baltimore, Maryland.

John Ohler, (son of Jacob) moved to western Ohio, near Mansfield, and later migrated to Auglaize County.

William Ohler, (son of John), born June 17, 1831, in Richland County, Ohio; died June 21, 1906, at Unipolis, Ohio; married in 1853, to Martha Lusk, (daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Compton), Lusk), born Oct. 19, 1835, in Auglaize, County, Ohio; died April 18, 1907, at Lima, Ohio.

James Oswell Ohler, son of William and Martha (Lusk) Ohler, was born Sept. 27, 1859, in Hardin County, Ohio; m. Oct. 15, 1884, at Hamden, Ohio, to Clara M. Paine, (Gen. VIII, No. 163, Paine Family). Was a student of Ohio Wesleyan University where he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity.

Graduated from the Cincinnati Law School in 1883, and in the same year began the practice of law in Lima, Ohio.

In 1888 he was elected City Solicitor of Lima, and has been for thirty years prominently identified with the business interests of Lima, dealing largely in real estate.

In 1889, he erected the Metropolitan Block on the corner of Main and North Streets and placed in it the first passenger elevator in Lima.

Through his mother, James O. Ohler is descended from the Compton family of Virginia, a short sketch of which follows:

CHAPTER XIII.

COMPTON

Hugh A. Allen, of Botetourt County, Virginia, married Anna Hobson, of Maryland. The Allen family were of English descent and were among the early settlers of Virginia.

Jane Virginia Allen, daughter of Hugh and Anna (Hobson) Allen, married William Compton, a son of John and Anna (McGuire) Compton, who settled first near Baltimore, Maryland, and later removed to Clear Fork, Tazewell County, Virginia.

Anna Compton, daughter of William and Jane (Allen) Compton, married Benjamin Lusk in Virginia, but later removed to Auglaize County, Ohio.

A genealogy of the Compton family is now being compiled which, it is said, will show a descent from William Compton, first Earl of Northampton, whose country seat was at Compton Wynnates, Warwickshire, England.

Martha Lusk, daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Compton) Lusk, born October 19, 1835, in Auglaize County, Ohio; died April 18, 1907, at Lima, Ohio; married 1853, to William Ohler, born June 17, 1831, in Richland Co., Ohio; died June 21, 1906, at Uniopolis, O.

CHAPTER XIV.

ROBY.

The Roby family first appears in Maryland in 1717, where in Calvert County, we find the name of "Mr. Jeffry Roby". One branch bought lands in Charles County, in 1750. Before that time they may have had long leases on the great manors—a very common practice as it was less expensive than obtaining grants. This being the case, having nothing but personal property they failed to make wills, so that it is very difficult to make connection between the various branches of the family then living in Charles County, and undoubtedly related.

The Tucker family is still more puzzling. The earliest will found was in Calvert County, Maryland, whence they spread all over the state, but it has been found impossible to trace them.

One family was found holding lands in Montgomery County, but they parted with them as the deeds prove, before 1780, and all trace of them is lost. One "Thomas Tucker Jr." held lands in Charles County, early in the eighteenth century.

The ancestry of Elizabeth Roby, wife of Lemuel Shepherd Paine, (Gen. VIII, No. 123, Paine Family), can be traced definitely to Richard Roby (Gen. I, No. 1), of Trinity Parish, Charles County, Maryland. His will, probated May 10, 1801, leaves "to his wife Ann Roby, his whole estate, real and personal, she to be executor." The will was probated by Alexander Roby, Benjamin Roby and Elizabeth Roby.

William Roby, (Gen. II, No. 2), son of Richard and Ann Roby, married Susanna Dement, (daughter of William and Mary Dement) who was born, March 27, 1745, and died August 17, 1784. The Register of Trinity Parish, Charles County, gives the names of their children as follows:

- 3 George Dement, b. Dec. 25, 1764.
- 4 Charles, b. May 14, 1766.
- 5 Elizabeth, b. Jan. 18, 1768.
- 6 Townley, b. Jan. 1, 1770.
- 7 Katherine, b. Dec. 10, 1771.
- 8 Truman, b. Aug. 24, 1773.
- 9 Cornelius, b. Jan. 26, 1775.
- 10 Acquilla, b. Dec. 9, 1777.
- 11 Hezekiah, b. 1779.
- 12 Mary, b. Dec. 29, 1781.

George Dement Roby, (Gen. III, No. 3), eldest son of William and Susanna (Dement) Roby, removed to Montgomery County, Maryland; he was married, but the name of his wife is unknown. By a deed of gift recorded June 23, 1817, he names two of his children, John B. and Cassandra.

John Basil Roby, (Gen. IV, No. 13), son of George (Dement) Roby, married Elizabeth A. Woodgert, Jan. 6, 1814. The maiden name of Elizabeth Woodgert's mother was Charlotte Tucker and they were members of the Roman Catholic Church.

A curious incident occurred in this connection:

The Roby family, into which she married, was of the Protestant religion, and considerable opposition was made by both families to the marriage on account of religious differences.

It resulted, however, in the promise of John B. Roby to conform to the religion of his wife. In 1817, they removed to Tarlton, Pickaway County, Ohio, where he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Those were the days of the "Circuit Rider," as the pastor of that church was known in pioneer times, because of the number of charges belonging to each circuit, which he was obliged to visit in turn. During his absence, the "class leader" took his place and as far as possible assumed his responsibilities. A strong friendship existed between John Roby and his class leader, and together they labored long and hard to induce the wife of the former to abandon her church and ally herself with that of her husband.

This was eventually brought about by a dream in which Mrs. Roby saw herself standing with her mother in an open field beside a country "stile;" just over the fence, appeared the figures of her husband and his friend the "class leader"

Her mother, who had been holding her daughter's hand, released it, and bade her cross the stile and join her husband.

Being of a superstitious nature, she took this as an omen bidding her leave her own church and join that of her husband, which she did.

The children of John B. and Elizabeth (Woodgert) Roby were as follows:

- 14 Mary Ann.
- 15 George W.
- 16 Elizabeth.
- 17 Emily.
- 18 William Basil.
- 19 Martha.
- 20 Henrietta.
- 21 Matilda Amelia.

Elizabeth Roby, (Gen. V, No. 16), daughter of John B. and Elizabeth (Woodgert) Roby, was born May 16, 1820, at Tarlton, Ohio; married Lemuel Shepherd Paine, (See Paine Family, Gen. VII, No. 123).

Her father stated that he could trace his ancestry back to the coming of Lord Baltimore to Maryland, but in what way is unknown to us.

The following notes upon various members of the Roby family are given below, although the connection which existed between them is not known.

“Inventory of the estate of Mr. Jefry Roby late of this (Calvert) County by Adam Spence and Apfradon (?) Johnson. Amount £50, Oct. 30, 1704, (Annapolis Inventories for 1705, p. 284).

CHAPTER XV.

SHEPARD.

Ralph Shepard, (Gen. I, No. 1), b. 1603, in England; d. Sept, 11, 1693, at Charlestown, Massachusetts; m. in England to Thanksford———.

The following sketch is taken from the book entitled "Ralph Shepard, Puritan," by permission of the author, Mr. C. Sydney Shepard of New Haven, New York.

IN ENGLAND

With the exception of two or three facts, we know little about Ralph Shepard before his departure for America. He was born in 1603, and presumably passed his early days in England, plying his trade.

He was a tailor, and probably an officer in the "Drapers' Guild." It has been said that it takes nine tailors to make a man, but the slur is unjust. The first Lord Mayor of London was a draper, and membership in a guild in the seventeenth century was an honor. At that time the trades held a vastly different relation to the social life of England than they do at present; for citizenship of London was acquired after the time of Edward II., chiefly through the crafts. We may infer then, from Ralph's being a member of the Drapers' Guild, that he was also a citizen of London.

He must have been influenced by those troublous times in the reigns of James I and Charles, I when the people were struggling for political and religious liberty; for it was on the twenty-fourth of April, 1634, when Archbishop Laud was persecuting the non-conformists, that Ralph was summoned before the Court of High Commissions. This was "An ecclesiastical court of very extensive jurisdiction, for the vindication of the peace and dignity of the church, by reforming, ordering and correcting the ecclesiastical state and persons, and all manners of errors, heresies, schisms, abuses, offences, contempts and enormities." The sentence pronounced against "Ralph Shepard of Limehouse, Midd," as he is called, is not given, but it is most probable that he left England on account of the sentence of the court.

At any rate, we know that a little more than a year later, he sailed for America. The last day of June, 1635, accompanied by his wife, Thanks, and daughter, Sara, he went aboard the "Abigail." She was bound for New England in charge of Robert Hachwell, master. Ralph's wife, according to the entry was twenty three, his daughter two, and he, himself, was twenty-nine. His age at any rate is not correct for we find by his tombstone and the Charlestown records that at this time, he must have been thirty-two. He was furnished, we learn further, with a certificate from the minister of Stepney parish.

According to well authenticated family tradition, the Shepards came from Stepney near London. Limehouse was then a hamlet in Stepney parish—St. Dunstan's in the East. It was from the minister of this parish that Ralph obtained his certificate. In 1730 Limehouse became the separate parish of St. Anne-Limehouse, now a part of London, and this district at present, densely populated, adjoins the East End.

Turning now to his history in America, the first mention that we find of Ralph Shepard is in the town records of Dedham. A company of people left Watertown to settle Dedham and it is said that he was in the former place. Savage says: "First sat down probably at Watertown," but by Farmer is called "of Weymouth." He was not at Weymouth till later. The Watertown records show nothing, but as the early Dedham town meetings were held in Watertown, he was probably in the latter place for a time at least.

But prior even to 1642, he must have removed to Weymouth; for his son, Isaac, was born there on the twentieth of June, 1639, and his daughter Trial, on the nineteenth of December, 1641.

According to Savage "He was of Rehoboth perhaps in 1644," but it seems more probable that he never lived there.

Ralph Shepard was certainly at Malden during this decade. He was not one of the incorporators in 1649, but was concerned in the ordination of Mr. Mathews in 1650, as appears from a petition presented to the Court May 16, 1655. On February 10th, 1650 — "I Ralph was blessed with the birth of daughter" whom he named Thanks and some time in June, 1653, "with a son", whom he called Jacob.

AT CONCORD

Though apparently well established at Malden, Ralph Shepard sold his home and removed to Concord. His daughter, Triall, had married Walter Power at Malden, March 11th, 1660-1. In 1666, they were living at Concord; but when Ralph moved there, it is uncertain; though it seems probable about that time.

THE CLOSE OF LIFE

We have been able to catch but a glance here and there of Ralph Shepard and now eleven years more roll by in silence. Then all we find is the simple record of his death. He is buried in the old Bell Rock Cemetery in Malden; and over his grave stands a tombstone weatherbeaten with the storms of two centuries.

The hour-glass and cross-bones tell us that time does not tarry and that death so comes to all; while the wings on either side of the skull suggest the hope of a blessed immortality. Below these symbols we read that "Ralph Shepard died aged ninety, September 11th, 1693."

But, though we are sure that he died just two hundred years ago, we can not be certain of the day of the month; for, according to the Charlestown records, it was a little earlier. There we find the following entry; "Ralph Shepard, aged ninety yeares, dyed August 20th, 1693."

The difference is slight, yet we should be better satisfied if the two records agreed. In those days, however, such mistakes were common. It may be that the tombstone was put up, and the inscription written from memory sometime after Ralph's decease — but this is only conjecture.

As Ralph's death is recorded at Charlestown and he was buried at Malden he must have lived at the former place, presumably at Charlestown-Mystic-Side, where Thomas Shepard lived. Ralph's advanced age would lead us to suppose that he was away from Concord on a visit only, and death overtook him unawares.

Another authority says of him:

Ralph Shepard, b. 1603, in England, emigrated to America in the "Abigail" (1635) with his wife "Thanks" and daughter "Sara," aged respectively "wife 23, daughter 2," located in Dedham Massachusetts, a plantation settled above the Charles river, and "attended the first meeting in 1636."

"At third town meeting, he and others petitioned for more land and asked to have the town named; which petition was partially granted, the town being named Dedham.

Ralph Shepard was the eighth named in the covenant. He attended twenty-one of the twenty-six town meetings; sold land in 1639, moved to Weymouth, where son Isaac, and daughter Trial were born in 1639 and 1641. Ralph Shepard was one of twenty who signed a compact for instituting a government of nine men, probably the founding of Rehoboth; was appointed with Nicholas Bryan, "Viewer of fences" at Weymouth, Massachusetts, Feb. 9, 1645; was a "Ruling Elder" in the church at Malden, Massachusetts. Admitted "Freeman at Malden, Massachusetts, in 1651. Bought large farm of Lieut. Joseph Wheeler in Concord, of which he deeded, March 25, 1666, sixty acres to the three children of his son Isaac, who had been killed by the Indians.

Thomas Shepard, (Gen. II, No. 3), b. 1632 or 1635, in America; d. Sept. 29, 1719 at Milton, Mass.; m. Nov. 19, 1658, at Malden, Mass., to Hannah Ensign, b. 1639; d. March 14, 1698, (daughter of Thomas Ensign of Scituate, who married Elizabeth Wilder of Hingham).

Because his birth record has never been discovered, some doubt has been expressed as to whether Thomas Shepard, (Gen. II, No. 3), was the son of Ralph, the emigrant ancestor.

However, there is no documentary evidence to the contrary; while there are several indications of value to the genealogist, which confirm the belief that he was. One genealogist says: "The knowledge which we have of the intimate relations of Ralph Shepard's other children with Thomas counts for a good deal."

The fact that Thomas Shepard once lived in Malden, and named a son Ralph is considered good evidence that he was his son, or at least that there was a close relationship: Two records are in existence of the date of his birth; one that he was 48 in 1683, and the other his gravestone, which says he died in 1719, aged 87. He was commonly called, "Thomas Shepard, of Malden," though he lived both at Medford and Charlestown (Mystic Side). He left a will in which he mentions his son Ralph.

THE WILL OF RALPH SHEPARD.

(Original in possession of Arthur J. Dudley, Douglass, Mass).

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN, the 20th day of May, Annoque Dominis, 1765. I, Ralph Shepard, of Douglass, in the county of Worchester; In his majesties province of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England; Being aged and infirm and sickly of body; but of sound and perfect mind and memory, and knowing that through age and weakness of my nature, I have but a little while to live, and being desirous to settle what outward estate the Lord hath lent to me: Do make and ordain this my last will and testament, in manner and form following: hereby breaking all and every will and testament, word or writing.

First and principally, I commend my soul into the hands of Almighty God, my creator and redeemer, and body to the earth to be decently buried at the disposition of my executors hereinafter named:

First, I will that my just debts that I owe shall be well and truly paid, by my executors, within the term of one year after my decease.

I do constitute and appoint my sons-in-law, William Dudley and Robert Humes, all of Douglass, to be executors to this my last will and testament, and if it shall please God that my well beloved wife Sarah, shall survive me, I will that she shall have the improvement of one third of all my estate, during her life in the world, and to be disposed of at her discretion: That is to say, after paying my just debts, and funeral charges, and the legacies named. To my eldest daughter, Sarah Dudley, I give five shillings, and the reason why I give no more to my daughter Sarah, is because she has already her full share of my estate.

To my daughter, Ann Dudley, I give six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence lawful money.

To my daughter Elizabeth Rider, I give six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence lawful money.

To my daughter Miriam Humes, I give six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence lawful money.

To my daughter Abigail Paine, I give thirteen pounds, six shillings and eight pence lawful money.

To my son, Simeon, I give two thirds of my estate, after paying out the debts and funeral charges and legacies before mentioned, to be paid by my executors as soon as they can make sale of such a quantity of land as they think sufficient to pay the debts and legacies.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, the day and year above-said. Signed and sealed by Ralph Shepard to be his last will and testament in presence of us.

CHAPTER XVII.

LEONARD.

To William A. Leonard, Bishop of Ohio, we owe a very comprehensive history of the Leonard family covering many years of research.

Bishop Leonard has visited the early homes of the Leonards, both in America and England, and descendants of the Leonard family will find much that is both interesting and instructive in his book, "Stephen Banks Leonard" printed for private circulation in 1909.

We are greatly indebted to the author for permission to make the following extracts from his valuable work:

"The name shows Saxon origin and was spelled in the sixth century as now, "Leonard."

Among the oldest families of Saxon origin in Kent were the Leonards; with the principal line the easier method of spelling the name, Lennard, was adopted as far back as the reign of Henry VI, but members of the same family preserved the ancient form of Leonard. The name is found some twelve hundred years ago among "the forest smiths" of Germany and spelled Leonard, which is the old German of the sixth century.

The significance is "lion hearted" from Leo, or Leon and ard. After the Saxon invasion of England, some of the Leonards, workmen in metals, left the continent, and settled in Kent and Sussex, among the iron hills.

In the course of time, as these mines proved unproductive, great inducements were offered to laborers skilled in the business, to remove to the western parts of England on the borders of Wales.

The Domesday Book of 1086, mentions the existence of iron works at this time in the countries of Somerset, Gloucester, Hereford, and other counties adjacent to the Welsh country.

It was from the iron-mining districts of Monmouthshire, in Wales, that the branch of the Leonard family came who settled in the New England colonies between 1625-50, and continued in the vicinity of Boston, the hereditary business of their ancestors.

During the fourteenth century, King Edward III. greatly encouraged the iron industry, and old Sussex and Kent became again the principal seat of the iron manufacture in Great Britain.

It is to these counties that the Leonards trace back their pedigree to landed property holders, and titled nobility. In fact, the family are said to have descended in two lines from Edward III, through two of his sons, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and his youngest son, Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester.

The name is found spelled two ways, Leonard and Lennard, but the coats of arms borne by all of them were the same, and early members of the family used both forms of orthography.

The title of rank was not brought into the family till the latter part of the sixteenth century and then by Margaret Fynes (or Fienes) sister and heir of Gregory, Lord Dacre.

Among the first found on record of the Leonard name, who attained to noted distinction, and transmitted a valuable estate, was George Leonard, Esq., who lived in the time of Henry VI, A. D. 1422-62.

The following pedigree is taken from "The Families of Lennard and Barrett," published in 1908, by Thomas Barrett-Lennard of Norwich, England.

LEONARD PEDIGREE.

- 1 George Lennard, m. Matilda of Kent, time of Henry VI.
- 2 John Lennard, m. Anne, daughter of J. Bird of Middlesex.
- 3 John Lennard, m. Catherine, daughter of T. Weston of Chepstral.
- 4 John Lennard, b. 1508; d. 1590; m. Elizabeth, daughter of W. Harman of Ellam.
- 5 Samson Lennard, m. Hon. Margaret Fynes, Baroness Dacre.

The third John Lennard, son of John and Catherine (Weston) Lennard, may be regarded as the founder of the Lennard family; one which for the next hundred years, was to hold a somewhat prominent position from its alliances and possessions, and also from the fact that it represented the ancient Barony of Dacre, which was held by Lennards from 1612 until 1788.

John was no doubt ambitious and not content to remain inactive until such time as he should inherit his father's property and to spend his life in the obscure position of a country squire.

He possessed great shrewdness and tact; and these qualities, combined with perseverance caused him not merely to attain distinction in his profession and considerable riches, but also to put him on terms of friendship with some of the leading men of the day.

He was no doubt not unfrequently present at the Queen's court, as during one of her journeys through Kent she recognized him at Dartford and addressed him by name.

His son Sampson Lennard, left a very interesting account in manuscript of the life of his father, John Lennard.

His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of William Harman of Ellam, Crayford, Kent, whose will was proved in 1547, by his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir John Butler.

William Harman was son of Henry, also of Ellam, clerk to the Crown of Henry VII; His will was proved in 1502.

John Lennard had three sons, Sampson, Benjamin and Samuel, and five daughters, Mary, Timothea, Rachael, Elizabeth and Anne.

Benjamin was admitted a member of Lincolns Inn, 1576.

Samuel was always spoken of as Sir Samuel, so he was presumably knighted, and he died on the 1st of April, 1618, at the home of his mother-in-law, Lady Swaney.

The marriages which John Lennard's daughters contracted are as follows:

Mary married (1) Guildford Waldingham; (2) Sir Thomas Gresham.

Thimothea, m. Sir Walter Covert of Slangham, Sussex.

Rachael married Edward Nevill, afterwards Lord Abergavenny.

Elizabeth married Sir Francis Euse, Chief Justice of North Wales.

Anne married Sir Marmaduke Darrell, cofferer to James I.

Sampson, as before stated, married Margaret Fynes, Baroness Dacre.

An account of the Lennard family prepared by the 29th Lord Dacre, is included by Mr. Thomas Barrett-Lennard in his book and is as follows:

"The family which for a long time held rank amongst those of the first note in Kent, was, as appears by the books in the Heralds office, and other authentic evidences, settled in Chevening in that county as early as King Henry the Sixth's time, when George Lennard was then living there" In support of this statement he cited several authorities, none of whom, however, mentions at what period this George lived.

CHEVENING, KENT, ENGLAND; HOME OF JOHN LENNARD

A Mr. Ebenezer Leonard (died 1894) of Boston, U. S. A., a very diligent antiquary, said he had discovered a John Lennard of Chepsted in 1440, who was the father of this George, and was probably born in the end of the fourteenth century, but he gives no reference to where he found him mentioned.

While on the subject of this Mr. Ebenezer Leonard I may mention that he was a member of a family in America, who for more than two hundred years have maintained a tradition that they are descended from the Lennards of Chevenning.

At the time of the war of Independence they remained loyal to England and one of them is said to have fitted out a small "fleet" at his own expense, to fight for the Crown.

In 1770, George Leonard, a colonel in the Royal American Guards, visited in England and had several interviews with Thomas, Lord Dacre, both at Belhus, and Bretton Street.

The latter placed his family muniments at his guest's disposal with every wish that he would be able to prove his relationship with him, as he would have greatly preferred that his title should descend to one of his own name than to one of his mother's descendants by her second marriage.

These American Leonards believe that they are descended from Samson Lennard of Chevenning or from his cousin Sampson Lennard the herald, who was the son of William, brother of John of Chevenning, and was a somewhat distinguished member of the College of Heralds and attained to the rank of "Bluemantle". Many of his "visitations" and other heraldic writings remain. He died 1628."

It is generally supposed, however, that the American family of Leonard, is descended from Samson Leonard of Chevenning, Kent, who was born about 1545, and married Margaret Fynes, Baronness Dacre in her own right.

Sampson Lennard died 1615, aged 71 years. His wife died in 1611, aged 70 years. He was a member of Parliament in 1614.

Fine engravings of the costly tombs of John Lennard, his son Samson, and the residences of members of the family, are given in Hasted's History of Kent.

The following pedigree is taken from the book, entitled "Stephen Banks Leonard," compiled by Bishop Leonard of Ohio.

LEONARD LINE.

(English).

- 1 John Lennard, of Knole, Kent., born 1479, died 1556.
- 2 John Lennard, son of John, born 1508, died 1590.
- 3 Samson Lennard, son of John, 11th Baron Dacre; born 1545; died 1615; married Lady Margaret Fynes, Baroness Dacre (sister of Gregory, 10th Baron Dacre), died, 1611.
- 4 Sir Henry Lennard, son of Samson; 12th Baron Dacre, born 1569; married Lady Chrysogna, daughter of Sir Richard Baker of Sissinghurst, Kent.
- 5 Richard Lennard, son of Henry; 13th Baron Dacre, seated at Chevenning, died 1630; married (1) Lady Anne, daughter of Sir Arthur Throckmorton, of Paulers Perry, Northampton; married (2) Dorothy, daughter of Dudley, Lord North.
- 6 Thomas Leonard of Pontipool, Wales, younger son of above, and brother of Francis, 14th Baron

JOHN LEONARD, KNOLE, KENT.
1479-1556

Dacre. (James and Henry Leonard (and possibly another brother John) sons of Thomas Leonard came to America and settled in Mass., first in Lynn and later in Taunton. They established the first iron works in America at Sangers, near Lynn).

- 7 James Leonard, son of Thomas Leonard, of Pontipool, Wales, born in Great Britain, came to America 1645, was not living in 1691. "Margaret, was step mother to all his children." James Leonard (Generation 7) is later referred to as Gen. 1 No. 1, of the Leonard Family in America.

From Hasteds "History of Kent", we learn that extensive iron works existed in Kent, (in vicinities of Chevenning and West Wickham seats of Lennards).

These works gradually died out, and Queen Elizabeth was one who urged persons acquainted with the iron business to go to Monmouthshire.

This may account for Leonards of Kent and Sussex going to Monmouthshire to manage iron works.

HURSTMONCEAUX CASTLE.

This magnificent castle became the home of the Lennards, Lord Dacre, upon the marriage of Samson Lennard, Esq., to Margaret Fienes, Baroness Dacre, and remained in possession of their descendants for four generations.

It was originally the property of a noble family named De Herst; In the year 1200, it passed into the hands of Maleran De Herst, who assumed the sur name of Monceaux; Maude de Monceaux, grand-daughter of Maleran, married Sir John De Fienes, and the manor of Hurstmonceaux passed to the family of Fienes.

Their descendant, Sir Roger de Fienes, began in 1440, to build the magnificent Hurstmonceaux Castle.

Sir Roger was succeeded by his son Richard, who married Joan, daughter and heir of Thomas Lord Dacre, and was in her right, declared Baroness Dacre, in 1458.

Their descendant, Margaret, Baroness Dacre, married Sampson Lennard Esq. of Chevening, Kent, who became eleventh Baron Dacre.

Sampson Lennard and his wife "lived much at Hurstmonceaux where they were remarkable for their noble house-keeping and splendid hospitality."

The castle measured 206 x 214 feet and was entirely surrounded by a moat. The interior consisted of numerous suites of rooms, courts, and galleries; upon many of the windows was painted the wolf-dog—the ancient supporter of the arms of the families of Fienes and Lennard. Hurstmonceaux, says one writer, formed a most important link between the fortified castle of the Mediaeval period and the palatial manor house of later days. "A noble composition which deserves the attentive study of the architect, the details being sufficiently ornamented to give an air of richness without impairing the character of boldness and strength proper to a castle. Horsfield says that "in the days of its glory, the castle had as many windows as there are days in the year, and as many chimneys as there are weeks."

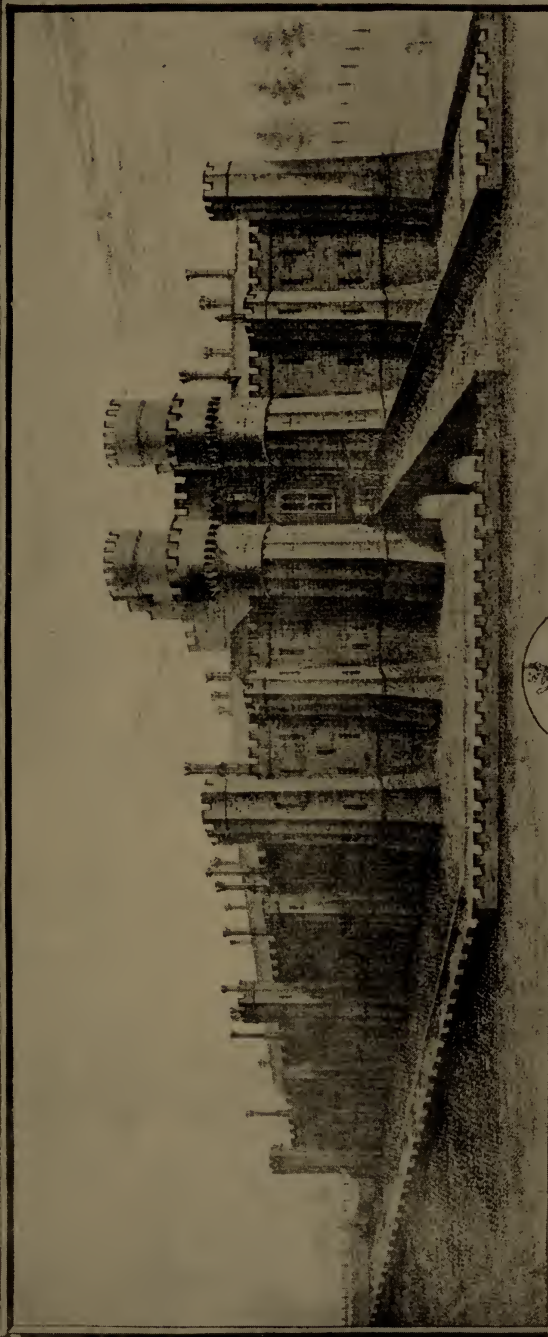

As we have seen, Richard Lennard became 13th Baron Dacre. He was twice married and by his first wife had four sons; Francis, who became 14th Baron Dacre, Henry, Thomas and Richard.

Richard died young, and by his second wife he had three children, Richard, Anne and Katherine.

Bishop Leonard, in his book, reproduces a picture of two handsome boys, which was painted by Sir Peter Leby (Pontypool). It is thought to represent the lads Henry and James Leonard, who later emigrated to America.

The original hangs on the walls of "Belhus," in Avely, Sussex, the home of Sir Thomas Barrett-Lennard, and came from Pontypool.

Thomas Lennard, son of Francis, became 15th Baron Dacre, and was also created Earl of Sussex; He became financially embarrassed and was forced to sell Hurstmonceaux Castle, which thus passed out of the Lennard family. Until 1777, it was "the most perfect and regular castellated mansion in the Kingdom."

About that time, the roof was taken down and the interior demolished by the owner, who used the materials in the construction of a modern manor house. The ancient tapestry, furniture and carvings were sold at public auction. Hurstmonceaux Castle is still said to be the most beautiful ruin in England.

LEONARDS AND IRON WORKS IN ENGLAND.

(By permission of Bishop W. A. Leonard).

The earliest account we have of the identification of the later English Leonards with iron work is found in the state calendars.

Richard Leonard, Lord Dacre, lived at Hurstmonceaux in 1617.

In December, 1620, upon inquiry as to who had paid the contribution to the Palatinate, Lord Dacre said that "he had done so;" and on March 26, 1626, there is execution of a grant to Richard, Lord Dacre, Thomas Letsome and Nicholas Page, of a privilege for making steele for 14 years invented and perfected by Letsome, by the charge of Lord Dacre and assistance of Page being the first inventor thereof. In the Hurstmonceaux household account book, there is an incidental reference to a "steale forge" which was probably near that castle and possibly the scene of these attempts to become successful "iron masters."

We know that there was an iron working on the estate nearly a hundred years earlier in 1574, as a return was made of the owners of iron works in the counties of Surrey, Sussex and Kent; and amongst these there is this entry:

"The Lord Dacres, 1 forge, 1 furnace, in Buckholdt in the hands of Jeffreys.

(See "The Families of Barrett and Leonard" p. 256).

With an inherited inclination and taste for the iron industry it was natural that the first Leonards who emigrated to the American colony should undertake this useful vocation, and we may look with some interest at the record of their endeavors in Massachusetts.

THE LEONARDS AND THEIR IRON WORKS IN MASSACHUSETTS COLONY.

In 1551, there are entries in the Lynn account book of monies paid to James Leonard for work rendered.

A brass furnace or foundry, and a refinery forge were established there as early as May 1645, and it was the first successful attempt, we are informed, to make "Barr Iron" in this country.

These works were established by Adam Harokes in 1630. Henry Leonard came to this country with his brother James, and they were skilled workmen in iron, and this name is the most noted in the annals of the New England iron industry. A common saying is "Where you can find iron works, there you can find a Leonard."

The next iron enterprise in New England was located in the town or township of Taunton, Mass., two miles from the city of Taunton.

At a town meeting at Taunton, held October 21, 1652, "it was agreed and granted by the town to the said Henry and James Leonard and Ralph Russell, free consent to come hither and join with certain of our inhabitants to set up a bloomery on Two Mile River." The Leonards contributed by their skill as iron-masters towards making this enterprise a success, and it long continued in a prosperous condition.

Thomas Leonard, and his brother James Leonard succeeded their father in the works and the family name was connected with the Taunton forge for many generations.

Thomas Leonard became manager and so continued until his death in 1713. Bar iron was made directly from the ore. The hammers and other heavy machinery for the Taunton bloomery came from abroad. The works made from twenty to thirty tons annually, averaging about $100 a ton of our currency.

A few years ago the old buildings were demolished and the foundation walls alone remain of the ancient Taunton iron works of 224 years—the oldest successful iron manufactory in New England.

The Whittington iron works on Mill River were built by James Leonard senior "forgeman" in 1670. These works embraced "a bloomerie with one hearth."

Mr. Leonard's three sons Joseph, Benjamin and Urich, having served in the Taunton iron works at the "refining and bloomerie" trade worked the forge. They had also a grist mill at the same place. This was the location of James Leonard's iron works. James Leonard died in 1691. The Whittington bloomery was continued by his sons and their successors for more than a hundred years.

KING PHILIP

Having established their forge on the banks of the Two Mile River, the wisdom and kindliness of the Leonards was made evident by the relationship which soon ripened into a close friendship with the Indian King, Philip, head of the Pequot tribes; the result being that later on, a contract was made between the King and the Leonards, in which it was agreed that the Indians would guard and protect the rights and interests of this family in the future. This condition of things lasted for many years: King Philip prevented the property and lives of the Leonards from being destroyed during the Indian uprisings, (and these kind services were reciprocated) and there are several interesting anecdotes relating to this situation.

One is, that the niece of King Philip, a squaw, named Betty, when both families of the Leonards were stricken with typhoid fever, gathered herbs, prepared and administered the medicine and nursed the sick ones back to health. She refused the wampum and other recompense, but she did accept as a present a pretty red cloak, and in it she said she wished to be buried.

When the great Indian chief ordered Taunton and the vicinity to be burned, he stipulated that the Leonard farms must not be disturbed. At their forge, he had his tomahawks and arrow-heads made.

Later on, when King Philip was killed and his head was cut off, it was buried in the cellar of the Leonard house.

In 1901, a reunion of the descendants of the Taunton Leonards was called in the city of Taunton. A large number met, and formed an association, adopted a constitution and by-laws, and prepared for the development of archives and publications which should bear upon the history of the family. Already they have accumulated an unusual amount of material; and having under their control the manuscript form compiled by the late Elisha C. Leonard, of New Bedford, when that is published we shall feel that the records of the clan have been scientifically and thoroughly arranged and perpetuated.

Through the courtesy of Mr. James Seaver, secretary of the Old Colony Historical Society of Taunton Massachusetts, the writer was permitted to copy the following letters. The first, written in Salem, Jan. 25 1851, and signed Joseph E. Sprague, is addressed to Hon. Francis Baylies of Taunton, author of the "Memoirs of Plymouth Colony." and a descendant of the Leonards.

The Rev. William McKinstry who is mentioned in the first letter, was the son of Dr. William McKinstry and his wife Priscilla, daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Leonard, pastor of the First Church in Plymouth, Massachusetts, She was the niece of Hon. George Leonard, of Norton, and cousin of Daniel Leonard, loyalist, of Taunton, subsequently Chief Justice of Bermuda.

Dr. William McKinstry was also a loyalist and left Taunton with his family and died in Boston, March 25, 1776. His family sailed for Halifax. His son, Rev. William McKinstry, entered the naval service of Great Britain: In an engagement with an American privateer in 1776, he lost his right hand and then became an Episcopal clergyman and it was about this time, we judge from the letters, that he visited Lady Dacre as a relative.

SALEM, JAN. 25, 1851.

MY DEAR SIR:-

I take the liberty to inclose you a biographical sketch which I drew two years since of the House of Leonard White, and to ask you what you know of the the descent of the Leonards from Lord Dacre—.

I supposed it was unquestionable until I found my sketch republished in the genealogical register with that part omitted, and some of the family wrote me, questioning the fact.

I will tell you my authority;

Mr. Leonard White, grandson of the Rev. Leonard of Plymouth, and his sister, Mrs. Bailey Bartlett, (the mother of both my wives) always spoke of it as an unquestionable fact.

They said also that the male line in England being extinct, the title was offered to Judge Daniel Leonard of Bermuda, but as it was an empty title, without an estate, he would not accept it.

My wife has a small miniature which we have always supposed was Lady Dacre. Rev. William McKinstry, likewise a grandson of Mr. N. Leonard, was settled in England as an Episcopal clergyman, and he received great attention from Lady Dacre as a relative.

Was Col. Samuel White, the grandfather of Mrs. Brown, connected with my family, the Whites of Haverhill—.

Our ancestor William White of Haverhill, was the first settler of Haverhill, and the Indian deed of the town was given to him. He had one son, John. That son left twelve children, from one of whom James descended, and from another, John, my wife descended.

Three of the family married Philip's. In another family, Leverett Sattonstall & James H. Dieneson descended.

Excuse liberty I take,
And believe me with great respect,
JOSEPH E. SPRAGUE.

NORTHAMPTON, 17 DEC., 1851.

HON. FRANCIS BAYLIES:

MY DEAR SIR:-

Without the honor of your acquaintance, though a native of the same country with you, I beg to obtrude a little upon your attention, touching matters of family and ancestral history. I am led to this by a note appended to Mr. Deane's "Genealogical Memoirs" of the Leonard family" announcing that you have in preparation a genealogy of the Norton Leonards.

As I was born in the east parish of Attleboro, and spent my years of boyhood there, I heard much of Judge Leonard of Norton,— of his immense wealth, his extensive estate, his park of deer, his tenants, his hired men, and his whims with them.

I used to see him often passing through Attleboro on his way to Providence and heard of his aristocratic feelings and habits, I often passed his mansion during my thirteen years residence at South Weymouth, and am prepared to feel an interest in your forthcoming publication.

We genealogists (potato diggers they call us) are disinterested and disposed to sympathize in every such undertaking, especially in memoirs of distinguished families like that of the Leonards.

Mr. Deane gives the tradition, the truth of which has been doubted by some, that the Leonards settled at Reynham, are descended from the Leonards, Lord Dacre.

You, doubtless, have seen the genealogy of the Leonards, compiled by George Leonard, a tory of the Revolution, which shows such a descent from that noble house.

Mr. Dexter M. Leonard, 23 Federal street, Providence, showed me a copy of the chart made out by George Leonard, which he obtained from J. B. H. Leonard, who resides in or near Providence, and who graduated at Brown's University, in 1814.

The proof of the noble descent of the Leonards of our county of Bristol is not within my sphere of research or means of knowledge, but I have traced the descent of the Lennards, Lord Dacre, from William the Conqueror, through King Edward III, and from that monarch through two of his sons, John of Gaunt, and Thomas Plantagenet.

King Edward III, was in the tenth generation from William the Conqueror, reckoning both in the series, and Thomas Barrett Leonard, the last Lord Dacre who bore the name of Lennard, was in the 23rd generation from the conqueror.

Thomas was the XV Baron Dacre. The genealogy from the Conqueror, I compiled from the genealogy of Washington by F. N. Givelt Mapleson Esq. in his "Three books of Heraldry," a new edition of which will appear about Christmas from the press of John Wiley, New York.

That from King Edward III, I compiled from Nieveles's "Peerage" and a list of the Kings of England.

A son of Samuel G. Drake of Boston, has been at my house and has copied the genealogy from my manuscript and he promised me that he would show the same to Mr. William R. Deane. I compiled it with considerable care and labor, but should be glad to have any deficiency supplied and any error corrected.

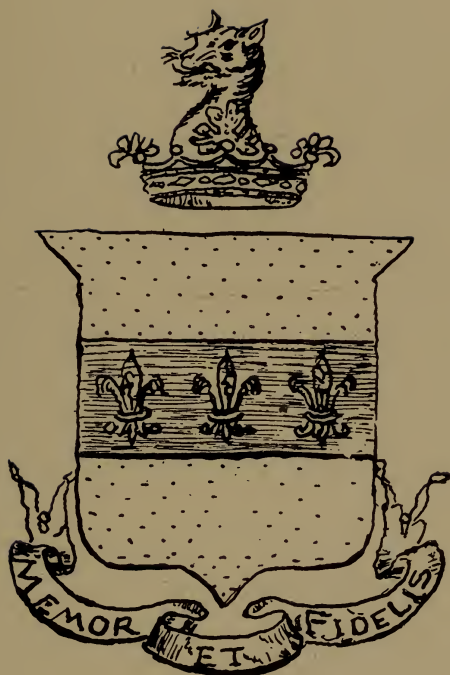

Mr. Deane expressed a doubt as to the ground of Charles T. Rupers succession to the barony of Dacre.

Nicholas calls him Trevor Charles Ruper, and states that he was half-nephew of Thomas Barret Lennard, and was his heir. Thomas dying sine prule. Thomas inherited the barony from his mother Anne Leonard, whose first husband was Richard Barrett Lennard, who was not a baron. Anne, his wife was daughter and heir of Thomas Lennard, XIV Lord Dacre, who died without male issue.

Anne, Baroness Dacre, married for her second husband Henry Ruper, VIII Baron Teynham, to whom she was third wife, and had by him two sons; Charles who married Gertrude, daughter of John Trevor and second Henry, killed in a duel.

Charles Ruper, ob. vita niétris, and the barony devolved upon his son, Trevor Charles Ruper, who dying, sine prule, the barony descended on his sister and heir Gertrude, wife of Thomas Brand Esq.

She, dying in 1819, the barony devolved on her son Thomas Brand the present Baron Dacre, and Baron Multon of Gillesland. So the blood of the Lennards runs in his veins. Doubtless the present Lord Dacre has the family record from which proof of the descent of the Leonards of Reynham, from that noble house could be obtained, if such is their descent.

I hope you will be successful in all your researches, and I am glad of the prospect that the history of a highly distinguished New England family is to be conserved for the information of this and future generations.

I am, Dear Sir,

Very respectfully yours,

WILLIAM TYLER

GENEALOGICAL MEMOIR OF THE LEONARD FAMILY

BY WILLIAM REED DEANE, MEMBER OF

N. E. H. & G. SOCIETY.

(From Vol. V. New England Historical and Genealogical Register).

"It is now about sixty years since Rev. Perry Fobes, L. L. D., Pastor of the Congregational Church in Raynham, furnished for the Massachusetts historical collections, an account of the Leonard family; particularly of its longevity, promotion to office, and attachment to the iron manufacture. In his parish was the location of that family. There they built their forge. There they erected their first dwelling; and there passed the eventful scenes of their transactions and intercourse with the Indians; particularly with King Philip, that famous and warlike chieftain of the red man.

The account of Dr. Fobes concerning the Leonard family is believed to be the first family genealogy of any considerable extent printed in New England. Two generations have passed since Dr. Fobes' article was written, and now another individual similarly connected with the family undertakes to continue the account to the present period. The brothers who first came to New England, are stated by Mr. Fobes to have been from Pontypool, County of Monmouth, Wales. Pontypool is situated between two hills on a rivulet called the Avon: it is about twelve miles from Newport, the nearest harbor; this place was celebrated for its working of iron at an early date.

The Leonards had undoubtedly some claim to the ownership of iron works at Bilston County, Stafford, England. Dr. Fobes states that the forge at Raynham, Massachusetts, was the first erected in America. This statement is evidently incorrect: at Lynn and Braintree forges were established at an earlier date. James and Henry Leonard were connected with them, but finally settled at Raynham, where they built the first iron works in the old Colony. At that time, the proprietors of the iron works at Lynn and Braintree had a monopoly by grant of this business for the Massachusetts Colony. Their neighbors of the Plymouth Colony were also desirous to establish works of this kind and "It was agreed and granted by the town to the said Henry Leonard and James Leonard, his brother, and Ralph Russell, free consent to come hither and join with certain of our inhabitants to set up a bloomery work on the "Two Mile River."

The "Bloomery" according to this agreement was erected; and the iron manufacture extensively and prosperously pursued. The forge at Raynham was the great joint stock company of that vicinity and period. For several generations are found on the probate and other records from "father to son," of "my share" or "shares in the iron works" as transmitted from father to son or other heirs of the succeeding generations. These works were undoubtedly very profitable.

Henry Leonard who, with his brother James, established the forge at Taunton (now Raynham) was at Lynn in 1655 and 1668 and afterwards carried on the works at Rowley Village, which place he left early in 1674; and at that time, or soon after, went to New Jersey, establishing the iron manufacture in that state. Henry's sons Samuel, Nathaniel, and Thomas, contracted to carry on the works at Rowley Village, after their father had left, but undoubtedly soon followed him to New Jersey, where numerous and highly respected descendants are now living, and where generation after generation of this branch of the family, it is believed to the present day have been more or less interested in their favorite pursuit—the manufacture of iron.

Hon. Stephen B. Leonard, M. C. 1835-7 and 1839-41, is said to be of that family.

The Leonards were interested in the iron works at Lynn, Braintree, Rowley Village, and Taunton; and at a later date, in those at Canton, so that the observations where you can find iron works, there you will find a Leonard has been almost literally verified. They were probably interested in most, if not all, of the iron works established in this country within the first century after its settlement, and it is a remarkable fact that the iron manufacture has continued successively, and generally very successfully, in the hands of the Leonards or their descendants, down to the present day. Their old forge has been in constant use for very nearly two hundred years, and is now (Oct. 1851) in the full tide of successful operation.

The old Colony Iron Company at Squabetty on Taunton Great River, is carried on by descendants of James Leonard.

The old Leonard House which stood but a few rods from the forge was pulled down a few years since. A part of this house was probably built as early as 1670, although the vane upon it had stenciled or cut into it the year 1770. It had been occupied by the family down to the seventh generation, and the spot with modern dwellings is now owned and occupied by the eighth. At the time the old home was demolished, it was probably the oldest dwelling in New England, if not in the country.

(Note. The oldest dwelling now standing in New England, is supposed to be the home, lately occupied by the Leonard family in Norton). It was apparently modeled after an English fashion of the eighteenth century with some modifications proper for defence against the Indians.

This home in its first rude form, was, with another, kept constantly garrisoned during Philip's war. In the cellar, under this house, was deposited for a considerable time, the head of King Philip: for it seems that even Philip himself shared the fate of kings. He was decolated and his head carried about and shown as a curiosity by one Alderman, the Indian who shot him. It is greatly to be regretted that this ancient Gothic structure was not suffered to remain as a kind of castellated curiosity, a monumental memento telling in silent but expressive eloquence to future generations, the story of the thrilling scenes by which it was surrounded and through which it had passed.

It has been said that the Leonards are of the family of Lennard, Lord Dacre, one of the most distinguished families of the nobility in the United Kingdom, and descended in two lines from Edward III, through two of his sons, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester: and this statement has some plausibility. When Daniel Leonard late Chief Justice of Bermuda, first went to England to reside, he was introduced to Lord Dacre, then a Leonard, "who acknowledged the affinity" and Rev. William McKinstry who was a descendant of the Taunton Leonards and settled in England" was noticed as a relative by Lady Dacre," That the name Leonard is identical with that of Lennard is evident, as the same arms are born by both names.

The earlier members of the Dacre family spelled it both ways. It is said that the title of Baron Dacre belonged to the Taunton Leonards. Sir Thomas Barrett Lennard, Lord Dacre, was the last Lennard who enjoyed that title. Upon his death in 1736, when no male heir appeared, George Leonard (7), son of George (6), (both of whom were loyalists and went to the British province to live) came to Norton and Raynham to consult with the Leonards there upon the expediency of claiming the title in question.

The precise evidence, which could then have been brought forward to enforce this claim is unknown to the writer of this article. It is understood however, that the particular individual who would have been the heir, if the title belonged to the Taunton Leonards, preferred the independence of Democratic liberty and ease, to bearing the aristocratic honor of nobility in meekness or otherwise. The statement has been made by J. E. Sprague, Esq., of Salem, in the Essex Register, that the title of Baron was offered by the English government to the Hon. Daniel Leonard and that he refused it.

Of Daniel Leonard, of Taunton, Massachusetts, a member of the House of Representatives, John Adams said: "He wore a broad gold lace round the brim of his hat; he had made his cloak glitter with lace still broader; he had set up his chariot and pair, and constantly traveled in it from Taunton to Boston. Daniel Leonard belonged to a Boston club, with Josiah Quincy and others, which collected arguments for and against the right of Parliament to tax the colonists; he finally took the Tory view and removing to Bermuda, became its Chief Justice.

Taunton Green, on which, for the first time the American flag was unfurled for liberty, is soon to be further distinguished by the erection of a statue by Niehaus, in memory of James and Henry Leonard, emigrants from Pontypool, Monmouthshire, whose "Bloomerie" on the "Two Mile River" was the first successful iron-foundry on the American continent.

This monument, for which a beautiful design has been prepared, will be erected by the Leonard Family Association. Among the members and officers of this widespread connection are the Hon. John Hay, Secretary of State, Lewis A. Leonard, of New York: Hon. Robert Treat Paine, of Boston: S. C. Leonard, of Detroit, Mich.: Henry Lovering, of Boston, and Job. M. Leonard of Fall River, Massachusetts.

James Leonard was the progenitor of the Leonards of Taunton, Raynham and Norton.

He and his sons often traded with the Indians and were on such terms of friendship with them, that when the war broke out King Philip gave strict orders to his men never to hurt the Leonards; Philip resided in winter at Mt. Hope; but his summer residence was at Raynham, about a mile from the forge. Thomas Leonard, son of the preceding, was a distinguished character.

He came to New England with his father when a small boy, and afterwards worked at the bloomery art with him in the forge. He was a physician, mayor,

JAMES AND HENRY LEONARD

Justice of the Peace, town clerk and deacon, and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

Mayor George Leonard (4) third son of Thomas (3) removed about 1690 to Norton, then a part of Taunton, where he became the proprietor of very large tracts of land, being as it were, the founder of that town and the progenitor of the Norton family.

Here, this family as precursors of great wealth and of the largest landed estate, probably of any in New England, have lived for one hundred and sixty years. Rev. William Tyler of Northampton, who spent his early days within a few miles of the Leonard mansion, writes thus:

"The Norton family of Leonard, whether or not descended from the Lennards, Lord Dacre, have come the nearest to a baronial spirit and style of life, of any family I have known in New England".

BRIDGMAN.

(From Bridgman Genealogy).

James Bridgman, b. in England; d. March 1676, at Northampton, Mass.; m. Sarah———; d. Aug. 31, 1688, at Northampton, Mass.

Residence: Hartford, Conn.; Springfield, and Northampton, Mass.

James Bridgman, probably from Winchester, County Hants, England, came to America prior to 1640: for, on March 3 of that year, we first find record of him in this country, at Hartford, Connecticut. He was not one of the original proprietors, and whether he ever owned land there at all is doubtful. From subsequent records, it appears that he was a carpenter by trade. His eldest child of which we have any record, was born in that place and we infer that James was married there.

In 1643, he removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, the first mention of him being that "Goodman Bridgman received four acres planting lot, facing on ye great river." He evidently had come to stay. His home lot was the one previously owned by Thomas Horton; viz. the fifth homestead south of "ye way to the training place," which way is the modern Elm street.

The house lots all fronted on what is now Main Street and lay between that street and the Connecticut river. On the Main street frontage of what was then James Bridgman's home lot, is now located the block 546 Main Street which, by a strange coincidence, was built by Dr. William Bridgman, a descendant of James in the fifth generation. During his residence of twelve years in Springfield, James Bridgman is frequently mentioned in various transactions.

In 1645, James, in company with a few other Springfield men, pushed up the Connecticut river and settled in that part of Nonotunk, now called Northampton, Massachusetts. In this place, he seems to have spent his remaining years. His house lot in Northampton was on Hawley Street the original Main Street of the settlement. His name frequently appears in the records of Northampton. On May 3, 1659, the Dorchester, Massachusetts, records show that he paid a visit to his son-in-law, Timothy Tileston. Northampton records show that he had at least three children born in that place. Of the family connections of Sarah, his wife, we know nothing. On June 18th, 1661, her name is found on the membership roll of the church at Northampton. Prof. Strong, in his popular book "Our Country" says: "When Northampton was settled, in 1654, it was "way out west" on the frontier. Among early settlers in the then wilderness, who shaped the character and history of the town, were the Allens, Bartletts, Bridgmans," etc., etc.

The town early became distinguished for its marked religious character, and its educational advantages.

James Bridgman died in Northampton in March, 1676. Tradition says on the same night as the birth of his grandson, "Deliverance." It was customary to name children for any note-worthy event occurring at or near the time of their birth; and it was quite likely that this child "Deliverance" was named so to commemorate the deliverance of the family from the Indian raid referred to in the will of James Bridgman.

CHAPTER XX.

ADAMS.

"The family of Adams can claim the distinction of having the oldest family name on record.

The name is a very common one, both in America and England, going back as far as the Norman conquest.

Henry Adams was the founder of the famous Adams family of Quincy, Massachusetts, which has furnished two Presidents of the United States, and many others of the name who, "in every age of America's history have signally advanced its high destiny." It is said that "more descendants of Henry Adams have been graduates of Yale and Harvard, than of any other man who ever settled in America."

Henry Adams came from England about 1632, with his wife, eight sons and one daughter, and settled at what was then Braintree, now Quincy, Massachusetts.

Here on Feb. 24, 1639, the town of Boston granted him forty acres of land. This first Henry, says Daniel Munro Wilson, "was in the newly incorporated township, a man of mark—its first brewer (an important office among Englishmen) and also first town clerk, and "clerk of the writs."

All this would go to show that in 1640, he was no recent settler, but a rooted and firmly established inhabitant. The when and whence of his arrival, however, are both in dispute. President John Adams, who should know by right of family tradition, had the following inscription cut upon a tomb which he erected in 1817 to his ancestors. "In Memory of Henry Adams who took his flight from the Dragon, persecution, in Devonshire, in England,"

Another descendant, the Rev. H. F. Fairbanks, favors this supposition, because the name of Henry Adams has been for two centuries or so on an ancient parchment roll, which connects him with a distinguished house of that region.

This "ancient parchment roll" is known as the "Ap Adams pedigree" in which it is assumed that Henry Adams was of Welsh origin, and in the twelfth generation from Sir John, Lord Ap Adam, of Charlton Adam, in Somersetshire, and his wife Elizabeth de Gournai, daughter of Lord de Gournai, who it is historically said, was related to all the reigning houses of Europe, and whose ancestry extended to William the Conqueror and through Matilda his wife, to Charlemagne, Emperor of the West.

This ancient pedigree was furnished by William Downing Bruce, Esq., who says it was copied from an ancient parchment roll with arms, at the time of Charles the First, which he discovered among the papers of the late Hamlin Adams, Esq., of Middleton Hall, M. P., from the county of Carmathen.

Sir John, Lord Ap Adam, was summoned to Parliament 1296-1307, as Baron of the Realm.

In the upper part of a Gothic window in Tidenham Church, near Chepstow, the name of Lord Ap Adam, 1310, and his coat of arms, are still to be found beautifully executed in stained glass of great thickness and in perfect preservation.

This church, which the author had the pleasure of visiting quite recently, originally stood within the boundary of Wales, which at a later period was changed, and it now stands on English soil.

Ap Adam, (the first) came out of the "Marches of Wales". Lords of the Marches were noblemen who in the early ages inhabited and secured the Marches of Wales and Scotland, ruling as petty Kings, with their private laws.

The coat of arms, borne by Sir John, Lord Ap Adam, is the same as that brought by Henry Adams when he emigrated to America in 1632, and religiously preserved by his descendants; so it seems highly probable that he may have been a descendant of Sir John.

Mr. Henry Lea, the eminent genealogist, has recently published the result of his investigations in England, where he found two records of an Henry Adams which more probably relate to our Henry Adams, first, of America. In the will of John Adams, of Barton, St. David in 1603, he makes his son Henry Adams his executor."

Barton St. David is about two miles distant from Charlton Adam, (England). In Charlton-Mockrell, one-half mile distant from Charlton Adam, was found the marriage record of Henry Adams and Edith Squire.

If this was the marriage of Henry of Braintree, she was his second wife: The fact that his eldest son was born in 1604, and the second not until 1612, leaves an interval not otherwise explained.

Edith Squire was born in Charlton-Mockrell in 1587. Researches of Mr. Lea would indicate that Henry Adams and his family came from Kingweston, a neighboring locality. Mr. Lea says: "I fully agree that we have located Henry Adams the emigrant, in this part of Somersetshire; but all except one of the records of Kingweston, relating to the Adams families are missing.

This one is as follows:

"Kingweston, 1622, Johnnes Adams. filius Henrici Adams, baptizat. d. Dec. 31, 1695."

The Rev. Hiram Fairbanks, who spent many years in extensive researches in the counties of Devon and Somersetshire, as well as in this country, publishes this record:

Adams

"John Shepheard, of Braintree, in New England, carpenter, husband of Margaret, the daughter of Henry Squire," late of Kingweston, in Somersetshire, granted a power of attorney to John Adams of Concord to receive all rents for lands now or late in the tenure of Johnathan Adams, living near Sallsbury, in Somersetshire, England.

As to the social status of Henry Adams of Braintree, he was without doubt a yeoman. Westcote, in his "Devonshire" written in 1630, says: "Many of these, with us are gentlemen, descending from younger brothers."

The will of Henry Adams was proved June 8, 1647, and is as follows:

First, my will is that my sonne Peter and John, and my daughter Ursula, shall have the ground in the neck, both upland and meadow during the term I was to enjoy it, until it return into the towns hands again from whom I had it: also the aker in the mill fields: my will is that my books shall be divided amongst all my children; that my wife shall have and enjoy all my other goods so long as she live unmarried; and if she marry, then my will is that Joseph, Edward, and my daughter Ursula, should enjoy all my grounds in the field that lieth on the way to Weymouth-ferry, and my house lott, with all the houses and fruit trees, and all my movables, at the death or marriage of my wife; provided, they and their mother, shall pay to my son Samuel that which is due him for the ground I bought of him, to be paid in convenient time: But in case of God soe deal with my wife, that she bee constrained to make use of something by way of sale, she may.

Finally, for movables my will is, that my sonne Peter and John, shall have an equal share with my sonne Joseph and Edward, and my daughter Ursula.

CHAPTER XXII.

PIERCE.

(From "Some Colonial Homesteads and Their Stories," by Marion Harland). By permission of the author.

"In 1630, the good ship "Mary and John," chartered by the English company that had in charge the Massachusetts Bay Colony, brought to Boston a young man by the name of Robert Pierce. Professor J. M. Pierce of Harvard, says: A high degree of uniformity exists in the spelling as used by persons bearing the name in any one family connection.

The branch which sprang from Robert Pierce has consistently, for nine generations, given the preference to the method of spelling the name which will be used in this paper, but as the very able "Peirce Genealogy" compiled by Frederick Clifton Peirce, of Rockford, Illinois, proves, the parent stock was the same.

The first patent granted by the Council of Plymouth of land in New England, was to John Pierce, of London, and his associates, dates June 1, 1621. This was a roaming patent, granting 100 acres for each settler already transported.

Under this roaming patent, Robert settled on what was called "Pine Neck"—so runs the MS. Genealogical record kept in the homestead—"near the water." The cellar of his house was to be seen there untill 1804. In 1640 he built (in Dorchester, Mass.) another dwelling. At that time Robert Pierce's house and the Minot house on the adjoining farm, were the only houses in this part of the country. The road from Boston to Plymouth was up Oak Avenue (directly past Robert's door) and near the old well, crossing Neponset River at a fording-place near the Granite Bridge.

Robert married Ann Greenway, daughter of one of the first settlers of Dorchester, generally known as "Goodman Greenway."

John Greenway, or, according to the boundless license in the matter of orthography prevalent at that date, Grenway, or Greenaway, was a fellow passenger of Robert Pierce, and, it is supposed, was accompanied by his whole family. Robert Pierce married his daughter just before, or just after the voyage to America.

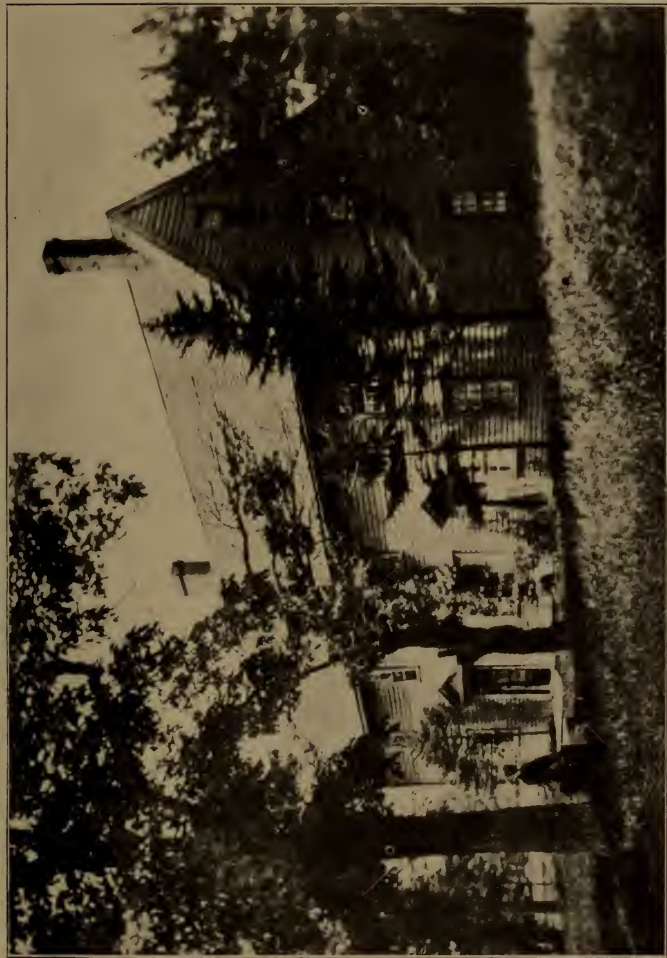

"Ann was born in England in 1591, and lived to the uncommon age of 104 years. She died December 31, 1695."

Robert's death is thus set down:

"Robert Pierce of ye greate lotts, died January 11, 1664. The descendants of Robert of Dorchester, have been men of substance, being industrious and frugal, and have held a respectable rank in society, having intermarried with many of the best families in Dorchester and vicinity."

Thus a part of the quaint introduction to the family history made out by a descendant of the young Englishman who was freeman of the town of Dorchester in May, 1642. Painsstaking research on both sides of the sea, on the part of members of the family, and comparison of old records and heraldic devices have brought to light some curious and interesting facts antedating Robert Pierce's voyage to the New World.

These show the name to have been originally Percy, or Percie, and Robert of Dorchester to have been collaterally related to the Percys of Northumberland. Master George Percie, who won distinction for himself, and stability for John Smith's Virginian Colony, was a blood relation. His name appears again and again in the genealogical table, even down to the tenth generation of Robert's descendants. There is a tradition connecting the ancestry of the Dorchester freeholder with that of Harry Hotspur.

It is certain that among the effects brought from the old country, in the "Mary and John" was the coat-of-arms, the crest of which is given on another page. A faded copy of great age, still hangs in the old homestead in Oak Avenue, Dorchester.

The house built by Robert Pierce in 1640, is still standing; "The frame is of Massachusetts black oak," grown in "ye greate lotts." The beams, twelve by fourteen inches thick, are pinned together like the ribs of a ship, and cross heavily the low-browed wainscoted rooms. In the spacious parlor built by Colonel Samuel, there are nine doors. Forty years ago, the big fireplace in the family sitting-toom was altered to suit modern needs, and the beam running across the throat of the chimney taken out. It was black as as ebony, and as hard as lignum vitae. Cups, and other small articles were turned out of the wood as souvenirs, and distributed in the family. The removal of the ancient timber revealed a cavity in the masonry above, left by taking out one brick. Within it, set carefully side by side, was a pair of dainty satin slippers, the knots of ribbon on the insteps as perfect as when they were hidden away there—perhaps two hundred years before.

Did Ann Greenway bring them from England, and devise the queer receptacle to secure the cherished bit of finery from Indian "sneak thieves," or did Mary inherit them and conceal them from envious neighbors? Did one of the Abigails, or Sarahs, or Hannahs, or Marys, or Elizabeths, whose names are repeated in successive generations, tuck the pretty foreign things into a hole in the wall for safe keeping on the eve of a journey or visit, and return to find that, while she was away, they had been unwittingly walled in and up, as irretrievably as Marion's "Injured Constance" in the monastery vault?

The right end of the building was added by Colonel Samuel Pierce, and contains a spacious parlor with colonial furnishings.

Robert of Dorchester preserved, as long as he lived, a shipbiscuit brought from England by him in 1630. It is still treasured in the old house and is undoubtedly the "ripest" bread in America. Beside it, in the glass case made to keep it in, lies a corn-cob, used, for a generation, in shelling of corn by the first Samuel Pierce, who married Abigail Moseley in 1702. Other relics are sacredly kept under the roof-tree which, for more than two and a half centuries, has sheltered owners of the same blood and name. Among them are a stand and chest of drawers brought over in the "Mary and John", a Malacca cane, silver-banded, with an ivory head; a tall clock, a desk, and a mirror with beveled edges, which may have formed part of the plenishing of Ann Greenway. We cannot help building a little romance in connection with the long voyage taken by "Goodman Greenway" and his family, in company with young Robert.

"For divers good causes and considerations me thereunto moving, and specially for the great love and fatherly affection that I bear unto my sonne-in-law Robert Pearse, and Ann Pearse, my daughter—" is the preamble of the will which bequeaths to them a goodly estate.

Robert Pierce, (Gen. I, No. 1), b. 1591, in England; d. Jan 6, 1665, at Dorchester, Mass.; m. about 1630, to Ann Greenaway, b. 1591, in England; d. Dec. 31, 1695, at Dorchester. Freeman, May 18, 1642.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BASS.

Deacon Samuel Bass, (Gen. I, No. 1), b. 1595, in England; d. Sep. 30, 1694, at Braintree, Mass.; m. Ann—, b. 1600, in England; d. Sept 5, 1665, at Braintree, Mass.

Authority: Savages Genealogical Dictionary, Vol. I, p. 135.

Services: "Samuel Bass, 1632-1694, Deputy to General Assembly from Braintree, 1641, '42, '43, '45, '52, '54, '57, '59, '63, '64."

(From Register of Colonial Dames of Massachusetts, 1893-1905).

(Records of Massachusetts Colony (Shurtleff), Vol. 1, pp. 319, 329; Vol. 2, pp. 23, 55, 97, 265; Vol. 3, pp. 259, 340, 422; Vol. 4, pp. 72, 100, 116).

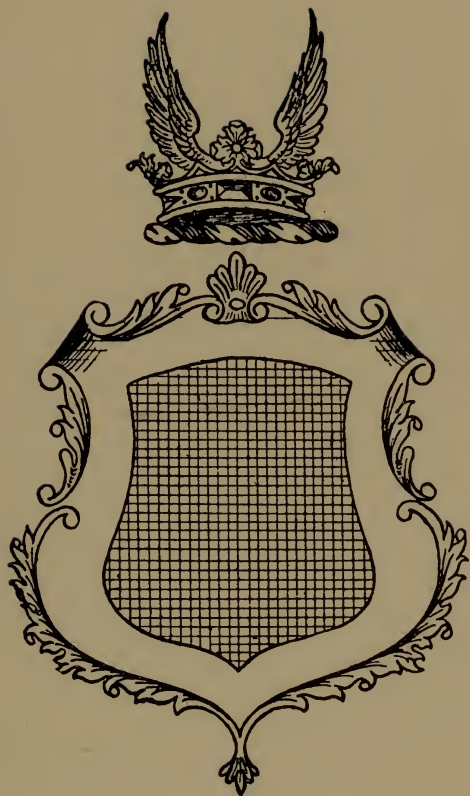

Samuel Bass, (Gen. I, No. 1), came to New England with his wife Anne, and probably one or two young children, among the first settlers of the Massachusetts colony about 1630, or soon after, and settled in Roxbury.

Their names were enrolled among the earliest members of the first church in that town, which was gathered as early as 1632, where they may be seen at this day.

He was admitted freeman, May 14, 1634, and lived in Roxbury until about 1640, when he removed his family to Braintree, (now Quincy), Massachusetts.

He was admitted a member of the "First Congregational Church," having been dismissed and recommended to them from the church in Roxbury.

He was chosen and ordained the first deacon of the church in Braintree, which office he held for about fifty years.

Deacon Samuel Bass was a man of strong and vigorous mind and was one of the leading men of the town for many years. (See History of Quincy).

He departed this life upon the thirteenth day of Sept., 1694, and was the father and grandfather, and great-grandfather of one hundred and sixty-two children before he died. The graves of Samuel and Ann Bass may be seen today, marked by small stones, upon which their names are distinctly cut, in the old cemetery belonging to the First Church, at Quincy Massachusetts.
